'Sea salt' Carter pilots nuclear sub

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — President Carter rode a nuclear submarine for the first time Friday, took the controls with his wife, Rosalynn, and drove it at top speed in a mock attack. He said the ship was a symbol of America's military strength.

"It is very crucial that our friends and potential adversaries understand that our country is able to defend itself with quiet confidence," Carter said after disembarking, wearing a nylon windbreaker and carrying his suitcase on his arm.

"CERTAINLY this ship could very well handle cruise missiles that would have a range far beyond the horizon," Carter said, adding that the missiles could be armed with either nuclear or conventional warheads.

He noted that the missiles are central to strategic arms limitation talks with the Soviet Union.

The President declared: "The cruise missile is an integral part of the future of our defense forces."

The Soviets want the United States to agree to limit the number of its cruise missiles. This country, in turn, wants the Soviet Union to limit its Backfire bomber.

Flying back to his holiday weekend quarters at St. Simons Island, Ga., after the submarine trip, Carter told reporters aboard Air Force One that Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko will meet twice more before mid-September on efforts to negotiate a new SALT agreement.

Carter said he did not have any specific dates for the meetings. Vance and Gromyko met

Death penalty vetoed; Deuk seeks to override

By Bob Schmidt
From Our State Bureau

SACRAMENTO — Gov. Brown, saying he wants to live in "a society where we do not attempt to use death as a punishment," Friday vetoed legislation which would have restored capital punishment in California.

The action, promised last January in the governor's annual State of the State message to the Legislature, came only hours after the Senate had completed legislative action on the measure by voting 27-10 to concur with Assembly amendments.

THE ORIGINAL Senate vote on the bill by Sen. George Deukmejian, R-Long Beach, was 29-10 on March 31. On May 18, the Assembly approved it 54-23.

Deukmejian said, after being informed of the veto, that he would seek an override of the veto "when I think I have the votes."

If the Legislature declines to override Brown's veto, Deukmejian, Atty. Gen. Evelle Younger and other death penalty supporters have promised an attempt will be made to qualify an initiative for statewide election next year.

All the Long Beach area state senators voted for the death penalty measure. Besides Deukmejian, they were Dennis Carpenter, R-Newport Beach; Robert Beverly, R-Manhattan Beach; William Campbell, R-Hacienda Heights; John Briggs, R-Fullerton; Paul Carpenter, D-Cypress, and Ralph Dills, D-Gardena.

Twenty-seven votes are needed for an override in the Senate and 54 in the Assembly, and Deukmejian pointed out that although the bill had received at least that many in each house, some of the Democratic supporters might choose not to vote against their party leader.

"I THINK it is very regrettable that the governor has turned a deaf ear on the overwhelming majority of the people of this state," Deukmejian said in a statement, "and on the Legislature and on the death penalty provisions in the State Constitution."

"The governor has given no responsible reason for vetoing this legislation. He has said he wants 'a society where we do not attempt to use death as a punishment.' He has ignored the fact that murderers are inflicting death as a punishment upon the innocent."

"I believe the majority of the people of California want a society where innocent people are not put to death."

Because the bill originated in the Senate, that house must act first on the override issue. If it provides the 27 votes necessary, the measure then goes to the Assembly.

Assemblyman Alister McAlister, D-San Jose, the lower house sponsor of the bill, said Friday: "It's tight. We've got a chance. It pretty much depends on whether the governor wants to make a fight of it."

He said he did not believe the governor would lobby very hard, if at all, to have his veto sustained.

but an aide to Brown said he "definitely plans to talk to some legislators about the bill."

Brown's veto message, typically, was brief. Addressed to the Senate, it read:

"Statistics can be marshalled and arguments propounded. But at some point, each of us must decide for himself what sort of future he would want. For me, this would be a society where we do not attempt to use death as a punishment."

$400-million glasses price gouge alleged

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — A Senate committee, the Federal Trade Commission and the Justice Department are investigating monopolistic practices in the sale of eyeglasses that may cost consumers $400 million a year in excessive prices.

The practices involve sophisticated forms of price rigging that combine to produce retail markups as high as 500 per cent on lenses and frames for many of the 112 million Americans who wear glasses, experts have told federal investigators.

Hearings held in the last three months by the Senate Select Committee on Small Business have shown that the prices federal agencies pay for glasses are only a fraction of those customarily charged to most private buyers in the open market.

THE PENTAGON, for example, finds that the relatively small number of glasses it buys on the open market cost, on the average, eight times as much as the glasses it assembles itself. The Pentagon's in-house costs include components and overhead.

The committee has also found that prices in the 45 states that either prohibit or limit the advertising of prices of glasses are 25 to 40 per cent higher than prices in states that permit advertising.

(California prohibits price advertising of glasses, but the law has not been enforced in the wake of court cases testing its validity.)

30,000 kids said lured into crime-run L.A. porn industry

Associated Press

The explicit depiction in movies, books and magazines of children engaged in sex acts is a big business venture involving organized crime and as many as 30,000 children in Los Angeles alone, witnesses told a congressional committee hearing in Los Angeles on Friday.

Daryl Gates, deputy chief of the Los Angeles Police Department, told the House Select Committee on Education and Labor that "intelligence has shown that organized crime has rapidly moved into the area of child pornography" in California.

The state has emerged as the world's film capital of "Kiddie Porn," as it has come to be known, Gates said.

Rep. James Jeffords, R-Vt., asked Gates about the validity of reports that 30,000 children were involved in Los Angeles alone.

"That probably is a very conservative figure," Gates said.

The House is considering testimony concerning HR 4572, a bill prohibiting the transportation of pornographic material involving children across state lines.

Gates said the bill would help local authorities, but said child pornography was so pervasive that "the laws will not solve the problem."

Los Angeles police investigator Lloyd Martin, asking the committee members to "close your eyes if you are offended," displayed magazines showing boys and girls, mostly young teenagers but some as young as 8-years-old, posing in various sexual positions.

Martin said that children involved in pornography are recruited from a vast army of runaways who quickly learn: "You survive by pulling up your dress or pulling down your pants."

Robin Lloyd, a local newsman who wrote a book on boy prostitution, told the committee of several recruitment ploys used by pornographers.

Economic indicators show expansion ahead

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government forecast of economic trends indicated Friday that the economy will continue expanding in the next few months.

The Commerce Department's index of leading economic indicators went up a half of 1 per cent in April, the third monthly increase in a row.

The department also revised the March index figure up from 1.4 to 1.9 per cent, making the March increase the biggest monthly rise since a 2.3 per cent gain in July 1975.

A department economist said the increases this year have averaged about a half of 1 per cent, indicating continued growth. He said the March increase was particularly large because much of the United States had just recovered from a cold winter.

Administration economists have predicted a strong annual growth rate of 6.5 to 7 per cent for the second quarter.

The index of leading indicators is a composite of 42 economic reports and is intended to forecast economic activity. Although falling 1.2 per cent in January, the index rose eight-tenths of 1 per cent in February before rising 1.9 per cent in March and half of 1 per cent in April.

Increases were recorded last month in four indicators: vendor performance, change in sensitive prices, contracts and orders for plant and equipment and money balance in 1972 dollars.

Decreasing were average work week, change in total liquid assets, stock prices, new orders and building permits.

The layoff rate was unchanged. Figures were not available on changes in inventories and net business formation.

The index for April stood at 130.7, or 30.7 per cent ahead of the total for 1967.

Trudeaus separate; she wants 'her own career'

OTTAWA, Canada (AP) — After months of rumors, Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau and his wife Margaret made it official Friday. They are separating after six years of marriage, at her request.

Trudeau, 57, will have custody of the couple's three sons, according to an announcement from the prime minister's office. It said Margaret, 28, "wishes to leave the marriage and pursue an independent career" and Trudeau accepted her decision "with regret."

The Trudeaus have spent little time together in the past three months, with Margaret becoming the center of controversy during trips to New York, Washington and other points.

She has taken special photo assignments for People magazine, of New York and continued her travels despite gossip in Canada about her conduct.

Neither Trudeau nor Margaret was available for comment. A spokesman for Trudeau said the prime minister was spending the weekend with his sons at the official summer residence on Harrington Lake, about 40 miles north of Quebec.

Margaret's friends said she was in New York and Washington last week, but they did not know where she is now. She was reported planning to spend most of June in Britain, possibly pursuing her career as a photographer.

Trudeau's spokesman said the break is a legal separation and he did not know if a divorce would follow. Both are Roman Catholics.

During the past year, Mrs. Trudeau has been increasingly in open revolt against the restraints on the wife of a prime minister.

of their Pacific island from Indonesia, have demanded the release of 21 fellow extremists jailed for terrorist activities, and a jumbo jet to take them — and a group of hostages — to an undisclosed location.

Dutch Prime Minister Joop den Uyl told a news conference the situation at the train was "still very serious" despite the encouraging release of the schoolchildren.

Den Uyl reiterated the government is not negotiating with the extremists and will not agree to hostages being transported out of the country.

Police and troops, backed by machine gun-mounted armored personnel carriers equipped with infrared night sights, have encircled the commuter train in flat, lush farmland 10 miles north of this town.

The inner security ring is three quarters of a mile from the four-car blue and yellow train. Patrols, including sharpshooters, are stationed in woods on the outer ring.

Among the hostages on the train are 20 women and 35 men, including at least seven teen-aged students and a pregnant woman suffering from thyroid trouble. Officials say she is being provided with regular medication.

In the nearby village of Boven-smilde, where the teachers, including two women, are still being held, 79 of the released children were reunited with their families. Twenty-six were hospitalized.

Singlaub's new job

Combined News Services

Maj. Gen. John K. Singlaub, removed from a senior post in South Korea for publicly challenging President Carter's decision to withdraw U.S. ground troops from that country, will become chief of staff of the Army's Forces Command.

The command is responsible for assuring the combat readiness of 292,000 regular soldiers and 670,000 National Guardsmen and reservists in the United States. Command headquarters is Fort McPherson, Atlanta, Ga.

Army officials said Singlaub's new assignment is comparable with that of staff of the U.S. command in Korea, a position from which the general was relieved on Carter's orders last Saturday. The chief of staff ranks third in both major commands.

Singlaub will be filling a vacancy created by the promotion of

Maj. Gen. John Q. Henion, now Forces Command chief of staff, to three stars and to command of the 9th Corps in Japan. Henion's promotion was announced last April 14.

Rabies shots

A rabies vaccine still in the experimental stages was flown to Tucson, Ariz., to treat a 3-year-old boy who was licked by a rabid dog. Pima County health officials said the youth, Christopher Harry, was licked on the face and hands by the dog, which was later shot by a neighbor. The special vaccine is needed because the youth is allergic to eggs, from which standard rabies vaccines are made. Although the youth was not bitten, officials said the shots were needed because saliva could have seeped into a sore or cut. The serum was flown to Arizona from the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta.

Kenton stable

Bandleader Stan Kenton, 65, remained hospitalized in Reading, Pa., listed in serious but stable condition Friday after surgery earlier this week to relieve pressure caused by a blood clot from a skull fracture. Kenton, one of the pioneers of progressive jazz, became well known as a bandleader during the mid-1940s.

Shelley is sued

Shelley Winters has been sued for $300,000 by a woman who claims the actress assaulted her at a Beverly Hills health club. Ellen Ober said in the suit, filed in Los Angeles Superior Court, that she suffered emotional distress and was forced to seek medical attention after Miss Winters allegedly beat her with hands and fists at the club's restaurant last Feb. 5.

Court for climber

Although New York City reduced a mountain to a molehill Friday by dropping its threat of a $250,000 suit against the daredevil who scaled the World Trade Center, accepting instead a fine of a penny a floor or $1.10 — the climber, George Willig, still faces a court appearance June 22 on charges of criminal trespass, reckless endangerment and disorderly conduct.

But if the tone of Willig's reception at a press conference is an indication, the 27-year-old toy-maker won't be harshly dealt with in court. Said Mayor Abraham D. Beame: "What George did was an act which required tremendous courage." In return for dropping the suit, the mayor said, "George has indicated his desire and willingness to discourage any rash of similar acts."

Bergland's black-white tour

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland toured Nehemiah Pearce's 100-acre farm in Wilson, N.C., Friday to see how a black family farmer makes a living, then headed down the road for dinner at a white-owned operation 10 times as large.

The idea, state officials who organized the tour said, was to give Bergland a chance to learn something about two widely differing types of farm operations and their problems.

Pearce took the secretary on a tour of his soybean and tobacco fields, his tobacco drying barn and his home, which Pearce and his wife, Irene, built with their own hands 17 years ago.

Mrs. Pearce said the house was comfortable, but when the secretary commented on the heat, she said, "We don't have an air conditioner, though. We're trying to save energy."

She said when the family found out Monday night about Bergland's visit, they did "everything we could to make it good. It's the first time anyone who was really important came to visit anyone in the family."

The children, she said, didn't want to go to school, "but we promised them he wouldn't be here before they got home." Besides the Pearces and their three children, Pearce's mother, Mrs. Roscoe Pearce, his brother Alexander and a sister share the farm. Besides tobacco and soybeans, Pearce raises corn and pigs and his wife keeps cows and chickens.

After visiting the Pearce farm, Bergland and the Pearces headed for the farm of Walter L. Williamson a few miles away, where a group of about 40 farmers awaited them for dinner. Williamson cultivates about 1,000 acres, much of it leased.

Frost's home

The 600 residents of Franconia, N.H., didn't want to have Robert Frost's old homestead just to turn it into a museum. "We wanted to give it life," said Town Moderator David E. Schaffer. So, from July 1 until Labor Day, the eight-room, colonial-style house where Frost wrote many of his best-known poems will be home to Katha Pollitt of New York City, whose poems have been published in the New Yorker, where she works, and the Atlantic Monthly. She will be a guest of Franconia and receive $1,000 as the town's first poet-in-residence. "It will be an annual event so long as we have money," Schaffer said.

Duvall wins

American actress Shelley Duvall shared the top female acting award Friday at the Cannes Film Festival for her role in the film "Three Women." Named with her for the award was Canadian actress Monique Mercure of the Canadian movie "J.A. Martin, Photographer." The Italian television film "Padre, Padrone" (My Father, My Master), was awarded the festival's Golden Palm top prize. Fernando Rey of Spain won the award for male actors for his role in "Elisa, Vida Mia," directed by Carlos Saura of Spain.

Banks hike prime rate

Combined News Services

NEW YORK — A number of major commercial banks across the country — including the nation's largest — said Friday they were boosting their prime lending rate from 6 1/2 to 6 3/4 per cent. The increase marked the second time this month the rate has jumped a quarter-point.

The move, which had been expected, was triggered by Federal Reserve figures released Thursday showing the average rate on commercial paper — short-term borrowing between corporations — is rising.

Among large banks increasing the rate were the San Francisco-based Bank of America, the nation's largest commercial bank, second-ranked Citibank, third-ranked Chase Manhattan Bank, fourth-ranked Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co., and seventh-biggest Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co. of Chicago.

Besides the Bank of America, other California banks hoisted prime lending rates. The increase goes into effect immediately for Crocker Bank. The Bank of America, Wells Fargo and the Bank of California made the hikes effective Tuesday.

SS, jobless pay tax?

WASHINGTON — The Carter administration, as part of its tax-revision proposals to be sent to Congress later this year, is considering urging that income taxes be imposed on Social Security and jobless benefits, the Chicago Sun-Times reported Friday. The newspaper said ending the income tax-free status of these benefits would hike taxes as much as $6.5 billion annually on retired people, their dependents and survivors and on unemployed persons. It added that White House sources say the administration also is seriously weighing a controversial $4-billion proposal to tax capital gains at death, forcing estates to pay income taxes on amounts by which the value of assets appreciated between acquisition and the time the assets are passed along to heirs.

New chief for NSA

WASHINGTON — The National Security Agency, whose secret budget is said to be the largest of any U.S. intelligence agency, will be headed by Vice Adm. Bobby R. Inman, a 46-year-old Texan, has announced. The NSA is the intelligence organization that runs the government's communications and code monitoring systems. Its new chief, now second in command at the Defense Intelligence Agency, will succeed Lieut. Gen. Lew Allen, who is being promoted to general and taking over the Air Force Systems Command. Inman, a 46-year-old Texan, is the second Navy admiral to be given a major intelligence post by President Carter. The first was Adm. Stansfield Turner, who is director of Central Intelligence.

Toll 66 in Soviet jet crash

MEXICO CITY — The death toll in the crash of a Soviet jetliner near Havana airport Friday was 66, the Cuban news agency Prensa Latina reported. A dispatch from Havana, monitored here, said 56 of the 58 passengers aboard the aircraft died in the crash. The entire crew of 10 was also killed. Two passengers, a West German and a Russian, were critically injured. Quoting Cuban aviation authorities, Prensa Latina said the aircraft crashed about 3,300 feet short of the runway as it was making its final approach to Havana's Jose Marti airport.

Uranium to India

NEW DELHI — President Carter has given the go-ahead to resupply India's major atomic power station with enriched uranium fuel, the U.S. Embassy announced Friday. A spokesman said the two countries also agreed to negotiate new safeguards against the spread of nuclear weapons technology and materials.

The plane, an Ilyushin 62, was en route to Havana from Moscow with stopovers in Frankfurt and Lisbon. A Canadian embassy spokesman in Havana said the plane had attempted to make an emergency landing with one engine afire when it crashed.

Carter on Soviets

ST. SIMONS ISLAND, Ga. — President Carter said Friday the ouster of Soviet President Nikolai Podgorny from the Politburo will strengthen the role of Communist Party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev. "I guess the reason for Podgorny's ouster was primarily domestic Soviet politics," Carter told reporters, hastily changing the word ouster to change. He added there is "no doubt in my mind that strengthens Brezhnev's role." Carter also said Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko will meet twice before mid-September to try to reach further agreement on nuclear arms limitation.

Coast air panel levies 'fees' for industrial polluters

From Our L.A. Bureau

Members of the South Coast Air Quality Management District voted unanimously Friday to levy an annual fee on the Southland's major industrial polluters of up to $12 a ton for hydrocarbons.

The vote followed a three-hour public hearing at which a number of industry spokesmen protested the emissions fee which is calculated to raise an additional $2 million a year for the district's operations.

The main contention of the industry spokesmen was that the new rule applies only to industrial plants that emit more than 25 tons a year of major smog and those that emit more than 249 tons of carbon monoxide annually.

Many of the spokesmen said they felt the liability should be spread among all polluters, including small businesses, municipally-owned utilities and transportation sources.

They also argued — unsuccessfully — that the emissions fee would be the "equivalent of a penalty" on those firms already meeting smog-control requirements.

The new rule goes into effect Jan. 1, 1978. As written, however, the fees will be charged for the amount and type of pollutants emitted during calendar year 1977.

District staff members were unable to explain how industrial polluters could be charged these fees from the beginning of this year through Friday, when the rule was adopted.

However, one official indicated that the fees charged for pollution in 1977 might be pro-rated from the effective date Friday.

Under the plan, industries that emit more than 25 tons of contaminants will be charged the $12 per ton for hydrocarbons; $9 per ton for particulates; $8 per ton for sulphur dioxide; and $7 per ton for nitrogen dioxides.

Those emitting more than 249 tons per year of carbon monoxide will be charged 10 cents per ton.

Members of the AQMD board noted the law setting up the smog agency in Los Angeles, Orange, Riverside and San Bernardino Counties presently exempts municipally-owned utilities from paying emissions fees. The exemption, for example, would apply to the Los Angeles City Department of Water and Power, but such utilities as Southern California Edison would have to pay the fee.

Los Angeles County Supervisor Ed Edelman, a member of the AQMD board who first proposed the emissions fees, said he understands a bill will be introduced soon in the Legislature to eliminate the exemption for municipally owned utilities.

Edelman noted that the additional $2 million in revenue, coupled with an earlier rule change making operating permits renewable each year, will increase new revenues generated to $4.3 million.

He said this would reduce the district's reliance on property-tax support to one-third of its annual budget, rather than the 65 per cent before the two new rules were adopted.

In adopting the change, board members also directed district staff to work on proposals that eventually would enable the district to charge similar emissions fees for smaller operations that emit less than 25 tons per year.

Los Angeles City Councilman Marvin Braude praised the new system, saying, "It is entirely fitting that the cost of pollution control be borne by those entities responsible for creating the problem in the first place."

He also called for a pollution charge to be levied over and above the emissions fee. District staff was directed to bring in a report on the extra charge by August.

States' rights

In 1969 the death blow to states' rights and local control occurred when President Nixon announced by executive order that the country had been divided into 10 regions. What states belong to what regions? R.K.S., Long Beach.

The executive order, issued Feb. 12, 1972, which set up administrative councils in 10 regions, only applies to five federal agencies and has no effect on control of local government. It was an attempt to decentralize operations in the U.S. Departments of Labor, Health, Education and Welfare, Housing and Urban Development, the Office of Economic Opportunity and the Small Business Administration.

These were departments which Nixon felt performed related functions and should be grouped together by regions throughout the country. Headquarters in Boston, includes Massachusetts, Connecticut, Maine, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Vermont. The New York office controls New York, New Jersey, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

Other regional headquarters are: Philadelphia for Pennsylvania, Delaware, District of Columbia, Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia; Atlanta for Georgia, Alabama, Florida, Kentucky, Mississippi, North and South Carolina and Tennessee; Chicago for Illinois, Indiana, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan and Ohio.

Kansas City, Kan., for Kansas; Iowa, Missouri and Nebraska; Dallas for Texas, Arkansas, Louisiana, New Mexico and Oklahoma; Denver for Colorado, Montana, North and South Dakota, Utah and Wyoming; San Francisco for California, Arizona, Nevada, Hawaii, Guam and American Samoa; and Seattle for Washington, Alaska, Idaho and Oregon.

County may sue unions to put end to rolling 'sickout'

From Our L.A. Bureau

Chief Deputy Personnel Director Herb Kaplan said Friday that Los Angeles County management is "seriously considering" filing a breach-of-promise lawsuit against employee unions in an effort to end a rolling "sickout" by various employee groups.

Kaplan also disclosed the county is taking a hard line on the sickout, refusing to pay employees for the day or days they stayed off the job unless a "bona fide" doctor's note is turned in.

"In other words, the burden of proof is on the employee to show he or she was really sick and unable to come to work," Kaplan said.

"EVEN DOCTORS" notes will be scrutinized thoroughly and if necessary we will be asking the doctors to specify what the illness was, what treatment was given, and whether the illness of sufficient severity to keep the employee away from work all day," he added.

Kaplan's statements were made as the sickout entered its fifth day with a total of 323 employees staying away Friday.

Officials said 62 non-emergency ambulance drivers and attendants, out of the 164 slated to work Friday at various county hospitals, failed to report for duty.

They said 15 of the 20 scheduled X-ray technicians at Harbor General Hospital called in sick.

Additionally, about 246 deputy probation officers out of more than 900 slated to work, also stayed off the job Friday.

The sickout started last Friday with nurses, X-ray and pharmacy technicians. By Monday, there was normal attendance for these trades, but a number of custodians at the hospitals stayed out.

On Tuesday, the "bargaining bug" spread to laboratory technicians and mental health workers. There was a full Wednesday — county payday — but on Thursday probation workers and hospital kitchen employees staged a sickout.

CONTRACTS for the bulk of the county's 80,000 employees expire June 30 and the pressure is beginning to show on both sides. One of the major thorns in the stalled negotiations appears to be management's effort to place a one-year moratorium on the county's automatic step-increase plan.

County salaries are paid on a range with a 5.5 per cent automatic hike built in between each of five salary steps. The annual step increase applies mainly to those starting new jobs or who are promoted.

The automatic step-increase has been paid over and above whatever salary increase bargaining units were able to obtain in base pay during annual negotiations.

Illicit drug lab uncovered in Compton

Lynwood sheriff's deputies discovered a drug laboratory Friday in East Compton and confiscated chemicals capable of producing PCP, an animal tranquilizer known as "angel dust." The street value of the confiscated substance was estimated at $1 million.

Johnny Simmons, 23, of the Washington Avenue address, and Sincere Thornton, 22, of Compton, were booked for possession of a narcotic substance for sale and also for receiving stolen property.

Suspect re-arraigned

A 19-year-old man was re-arraigned Friday, this time on a murder charge, after the Long Beach gas station attendant he was accused of shooting died.

Earl K. Ramsey Jr., of 2281 Wardlow Road, Long Beach, was arraigned on the single charge by Long Beach Municipal Court Judge Kenneth Sutherland.

Ramsey is charged in the slaying of Yun Chum, 37, of 3692 Iroquois Ave., Long Beach, who was shot in the abdomen with a handgun April 11 while working at the Advance Gas station at 3631 Santa Fe Ave., Long Beach.

Ramsey was bound over for trial on a charge of

WRECKAGE OF TRAIN LIES NEAR CEMENT TRUCK, BOTTOM Half dozen have died at this rural crossing in two years —AP Wirephoto

Truck, Amtrak train hit; driver killed, eight hurt

BELLINGHAM, Wash. (AP) — A truck driver died and eight other persons were injured Friday when a passenger train and a cement truck collided at a rural crossing where half a dozen motorists have been killed in two years.

The eastbound truck driven by Charles Albert Verkist, 42, of Bellingham, slammed into the second car — the cafe car — of Amtrak's Pacific International, heading for Seattle from Vancouver, British Columbia.

The train was moving at 75 miles an hour, according to Amtrak spokesman Art Lloyd, who said the maximum speed allowed on that section of track is 79 m.p.h.

The impact derailed all five coaches of the train, throwing the cafe car 100 feet off the track, he said. The locomotive was not derailed.

Lloyd said Amtrak hoped to clear the debris by tonight for the northbound run from Seattle to Vancouver. Until then, buses were being used to pick up Amtrak passengers at train stations, he said.

Brown OKs $1.4-billion hike in school finance bill

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Brown has agreed to boost his five-year school finance plan from $3.2 billion to $4.6 billion, the legislative author of the plan said Friday.

The author, Assemblyman Leroy Greene, D-Sacramento, said that after a review of the expected $2.75-billion budget surplus and long-range economic projections for the state, Brown approved amendments increasing each major portion of the bill.

The bill has passed the Assembly and is awaiting hearing in a Senate committee.

First-year costs of the measure would jump from $220 million to $341 million. By the fifth year, the bill would increase state spending by $1.4 billion, compared to $1.04 billion in an earlier draft.

The amendments promise both across-the-board aid and funds intended to wipe out inequities between rich and poor districts.

One amendment provides an extra $31 million for the state's 14 largest districts.

The big districts, which generally face higher costs than small districts for similar services, have complained that they are penalized under any bill that attempts to equalize school spending.

The school finance plan is a response to the California Supreme Court's Serrano decision, which said the state's current school finance system violates constitutional guarantees of equal protection because of unequal amounts of funds available in districts with varying property wealth.

When Brown unveiled his plan last January, he said it offered "substantial compliance" with that order because it would bring revenues for 88 per cent of the state's 4.5-million public school children to within $200 at the same tax rate in five years.

Critics said that was not good enough. Greene said it would take a week to develop a detailed analysis of the impact of the proposed amendments.

Judge warns school integration case rests on merits, not theory

Associated Press

Testimony by a school board member was cut short Friday by a judge who warned that the court was interested only in the merits of the board's plan to integrate the sprawling school district, not how the decision was arrived at.

In halting the testimony of Julian Nava, Superior Court Judge Paul Egly said that there was a "complete line of demarcation between this court and that board."

Egly said it was the board's role to listen to public objections to the plan, but added: "This court is here for the purpose of determining whether or not that plan has met the mandate" of a State Supreme Court ruling that the district be desegregated.

Nava was the first school board member to testify in the 9-week-old hearings on the board's integration plan, which has been criticized by some integration proponents as not extensive enough to adequately desegregate the 800,000-student district. The district has 625 schools spread over 600 square miles.

Among provisions of the board's plan would be limiting mandatory bus trips to half an hour.

School board attorney G. William Shea contended that he was trying to show by Nava's testimony that the district's integration plan was a result of public hearings.

But Egly said he would not allow the board "to use this courtroom to say that they have broad public support. I'm concerned with the constitutionality of what goes on in this courtroom."

Egly added: "It appears to me quite frankly, Mr. Shea, that you're using these proceedings to rehabilitate the board for what happened outside of what is happening in this courtroom."

Southland reservoirs 'half dry'

Associated Press

Drought has drained Southern California reservoirs to about half their capacity, and some could be empty by 1978 unless residents conserve, a water official warned Friday in Los Angeles.

"We can only get by this year without rationing if we save at least 10 per cent of the water we used in 1976," said Metropolitan Water District General Manager John H. Lauten.

He said 1976 "was the third driest year of record in California, and 1977 holds promise of being the driest year of record by quite a bit," Lauten told the California Water Resources Association that part of the problem faced by the district is convince ing the public there really is a severe water shortage.

"It wasn't until the drought really hit this year that the public started to listen to our message," he added.

Lauten stressed if residents fail to conserve water, they will face heavy fines for excessive consumption or mandatory rationing.

"One way or the other, we are going to reduce waste in the use of water and thereby maintain sufficient water in surface storage reservoirs so that we will have adequate storage reserves to carry us through an extended drought," Lauten said.

Although much of Southland California has nearly caught up with normal rainfall figures this year, it still hasn't made up for the effects of previous years' drought or for the current drought in Northern California, which formerly provided much of the southern area's water.

Lauten suggested the Southern California area could cope with several years of drought without additional water from the north if the Colorado River aqueduct can continue to deliver 1.2 million acre-feet of water each year, if Los Angeles can pump an additional 120,000 acre-feet of well water from the Owens Valley and if residents will reduce their consumption.

A lawsuit by Inyo County has tied up the Owens Valley wells, with a state appeals court rationing the water as best it can. The lawsuit, latest step in a 70-year battle for the water rights north of Los Angeles, contends the City Department of Water and Power is bleeding the valley dry. The DWP argues there is plenty of water in the valley.

The MWD has agreed to provide additional water to Los Angeles until the Owens Valley controversy can be settled, but the MWD is already running all nine pumps at maximum speed 24 hours a day, bringing water from the Colorado River. That includes the emergency backup pump normally held in reserve.

That leaves residential conservation as the most likely option.

"It really shouldn't be difficult for anyone to save 10 to 20 per cent, provided we get the public's full attention and convince it that there is a water shortage," Lauten said.

FRESNO (AP) — Court action was continued Friday until June 10 on a lawsuit aimed at stopping Los Angeles from increasing the amount of water it takes from Lake Crowley in Mono County.

Superior Court Judge Hollis Best gave the plaintiffs' attorney additional time to prepare arguments against a defense claim that an environmental impact statement cannot be required for increased releases from the reservoir.

Attorneys for the city of Los Angeles and Metropolitan Water District argued that regulations implementing California's environmental act specifically exclude existing public utility projects such as Lake Crowley. It was developed in the early 1940s as part of the Owens Valley system serving Los Angeles.

Leland H. Bray, representing the plaintiffs, contended that "exemptions were not meant to circumvent the law."

But Judge Best replied that the intent of the state exemptions is to let specified types of projects "circumvent the law. In fact, the law does not apply to these matters."

More than 100 residents of Inyo and Mono counties filed the suit after Los Angeles doubled releases from Crowley Lake to 300 cubic feet per second this spring.

Los Angeles officials told a reporter releases now are back to the previous level of 150 cubic feet per second. The lake now contains 56,000 acre-feet of water, up from 39,000 acre-feet last December because of runoff, they said.

Bray told the judge that the temporary increase in releases has made residents of the lake area fear "potential draining of the whole reservoir, affecting wildlife and the environment that has been created."

Ex-CBS exec admits CIA liaisons

By Les Brown
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — Sig Mickelson, president of CBS News in the 1960s, said Friday that his organization had cooperated with the Central Intelligence Agency to the extent of "sharing information" under implied instructions from William S. Paley, chairman of CBS Inc.

Mickelson was responding to statements made Thursday in a newspaper interview by Richard S.

Salant, who said that when he became president of CBS News in 1961 he severed the ties with the CIA that had existed in Mickelson's administration.

"I didn't raise an eyebrow about cooperating back then," said Mickelson, now president of Radio Free Europe-Radio Liberty. "But those were different times, 23 years ago, and it seemed perfectly normal to do it. I assumed that in the cold war climate that existed all the networks were cooperating."

In a telephone interview from London, Mickelson said that, on request, the network had provided intelligence agents with "outtakes" or portions of news film not broadcast on the air, that usually dealt with disturbances in foreign countries.

He added that on occasion CBS correspondents, upon their return to this country, met over dinner with Allen W. Dulles, then CIA director, to discuss informally "what was happening in the world."

Agents called him at various times asking questions he considered innocuous, Mickelson said, and he generally gave them the information they sought.

"These practices began in October of 1954, just after I returned from a trip abroad," Mickelson recalled. "I was called in to see Paley and found two CIA agents in his office. It was then that I learned our man in Stockholm, Austin Goodrich, had been placed there by the CIA and was working for them.

"Since this took place in Paley's presence, I concluded that cooperation with the agency carried the chairman's blessings. I felt, in fact, that in working with the CIA, to the extent we did, we were carrying out Paley's instructions."

Paley, who was at home ill Friday, said through an intermediary that he had no recollection of that episode. Moreover, according to his aide, E. Kidder Meade Jr., when Paley and Mickelson discussed that alleged meeting previously, "Sig seemed quite hazy about it, too."

Julian Goodman, chairman of the National Broadcasting Company, who was executive vice president of NBC News at the time of Mickelson's tenure with CBS, said that to his knowledge neither his company nor any correspondents for NBC News had cooperated with the CIA during that period.

"We had some visits from CIA agents, but they amounted to nothing but conversation," he said.

'Locust of lawyers' seen ahead

New York Times Service

NEW YORK — Chief Justice Warren E. Burger warned Friday that unless new ways are found for settling disputes, the country may be "over-run by hordes of lawyers hungry as locusts."

"The notion that most people want black-robed judges, well-dressed lawyers, and fine paneled courtrooms as the setting to resolve their disputes is not correct," he said. "People with problems, like people with pains, want relief, and they want it as quickly and inexpensively as possible."

The chief justice made his remarks at a conference sponsored by the American Bar Association at Columbia Law School on the resolution of minor disputes.

THERE are people, Burger said, "who seem to regard litigation as one of the essences of life, and who scorn any solutions short of the traditional; but the harsh truth is that if we do not devise substitutes for the courtroom processes, and do not do it rather quickly, we may well be on our way to a society overrun by hordes of lawyers, hungry as locusts, competing with each other and brigades of judges in numbers never before contemplated."

The chief justice has often spoken of the need for simplifying court procedures and has placed some of the blame for complicated procedures at the doorstep of the legal profession.

In the past several months, these themes have been sounded with increasing frequency by judges and professors in speeches and articles.

EARLIER this month, Chief Judge Charles D. Breitel of the New York State Court of Appeals warned that "if lawyers just grab, grab, grab, they may be killing the goose that lays the golden egg."

Burger drew applause Friday from an audience of lawyers, judges and consumer activists when he recalled a conversation he had with the chief of state of a "developing, but by no means poverty-stricken, country."

The chief of state, whom Burger did not name, asked whether he should invite a team of American legal experts to survey the country's problems and recommend a plan for a court system and legal education.

"My honest answer to him," said Burger, "was to let well enough alone."

Moss tries to block probes intervention

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The chairman of a House Committee investigative subcommittee, frustrated because the White House and the courts have stopped an investigation into government wiretapping, has introduced legislation to keep the courts out of some congressional investigations.

Under the proposal of panel chairman Rep. John E. Moss, D-Calif., whenever anyone tries to block compliance with a congressional subpoena by filing suit, the courts would be limited to determining that the subpoena was issued for a valid purpose and was issued in accordance with congressional rules.

For the past year, Moss's subcommittee has been involved in a fight with the White House over a subpoena to American Telephone & Telegraph Co. calling for records of wiretaps that had been requested by the FBI.

After the subpoena was issued last June, Moss said, he received a call from the White House claiming that delivery of the documents to the subcommittee would pose unacceptable security risks.

Six 'shocked' theologians rip Catholic group's sex report

AP News Service
Six Roman Catholic theologians have repudiated the conclusions of a major report on human sexuality issued by the Catholic Theological Society of America (CTSA) earlier this week.

Said the six in a signed statement: "The report is partisan in outlook, poor in scholarship, weak in argumentation, and fallacious in its conclusions. It thus merits repudiation and rejection and challenges others to positive and creative responses."

THE CTSA, an international group of more than 1,000 Catholic theologians in the United States and Canada, issued the 322-page report Tuesday, noting that it did so "without approval or disapproval" of the findings of the committee that spent five years preparing the document.

The CTSA report, questioning many commonly held Catholic views on sex, suggested that any approach to sexual behavior that tries to label isolated acts as "moral" or "immoral" is flawed because "human sexuality is simply too complex, too mysterious, too sacred a human experience for such categorization."

Instead, the report suggested that all sexual acts be judged on the basis of seven guidelines — whether an action fosters fidelity and whether it is honest, self-liberating, other-enriching, socially responsible, life-serving, and joyous.

John Kirvan, editor for the report, said that the report did not necessarily break any new ground but was simply "the first published articulation of what already is being taught by many Catholic theologians."

But the five critics of the report, including a CTSA past-president, said Thursday that the document is "not truly representative of the members of the CTSA" since "the authors of the report did not endeavor... to carry on a widespread consultation with interested members of the theological community."

They charged that the attempts by several theologians to aid the committee preparing the report were "rebuffed," "ignored," and "simply discarded without response," resulting in "a volume that is narrow in outlook."

They expressed shock at a report in which "no kind of sexual behavior is flatly excluded as morally irresponsible although such acts as adultery and homosexuality are judged wrong for the most part." They said the report "will be an embarrassment to many responsible CTSA members and to the Catholic laity."

THE CRITICS were particularly incensed that the report "even failed to consider the teaching of Vatican II, that 'by its very nature the institution of marriage and of married love is ordered to the procreation and education of offspring and it is in them that its crowning glory.'"

Those endorsing the document criticizing the CTSA report included the Reverends Eamon Carroll, CTSA past-president and a professor at the Catholic University of America, Washington; Ronald Lawler, Josephinum School of Theology, Worthington, Ohio; John Harvey, the DeSales House of Studies of the Washington Theological Cluster, Washington; William Smith, St. Joseph Seminary, Yonkers, N.Y.; and Henry V. Sattler, Scranton University, Scranton, Pa. William E. May, a lay theologian at Catholic University of America, also signed the statement.

NEW SPIRIT OF YOUTH

The Roman Catholic "revival" is part of a trend of many young people today, ministers report. The revolution of the 1960s seems to have evaporated, perhaps because its valid goals have been achieved. The young are seeking the certainties of ancient tradition.

They, of course, seek it in their youthful way, singing and dancing and shouting "Alleluia!" The churches had better let them do it.

It is hard to predict what the trend means. Each decade brings a new youth trend. This one appears to be healthy for religion and society.

BEWARE OF CHARITY

Through the mail and often in gaudy, heart-rending, high-priced magazine ads there are appeals for charity. The charitable person is tempted to reach for his checkbook.

Be cautious! Many of these organizations are like the inventor who invented a perfect machine for refining machine oil. "Where do you sell the oil?" he was asked. "Oh, we don't sell it. It takes all the oil to keep the machine functioning."

Before you give, demand to know just how the money is used. If the organization is actually doing good in the world, you will get an honest answer, a precise breakdown of what is done with the dollars and how many of them actually accomplish their purpose.

It takes money to raise money, of course, but if administrative costs are too great, keep your money in your wallet. From many of these organizations you will not get an honest answer as to where the money goes.

Probably the best way to give is through responsible local organizations such as your church or the United Way. They will tell you exactly how the money will be used. With almost no exceptions the answers will be honest.

REMEMBER YOUNG MEN

Memorial Day was founded for the remembrance of the dead, especially those who died in battle for the defense of America. It has degenerated into just another long weekend.

We should remember. And those of us who went to school with them and served with them do remember.

Some of the memories are odd. I remember Arthur, a campus clown, a likeable nut, a drunk and a clumsy guy who managed to do most things wrong. When war came, he went. The Navy shouldn't have trusted him with any machine more complicated than a mop, but presently he was a flying officer. Predictably it wasn't long until he took off from a carrier and plunged into the drink.

Was Arthur a hero? Well, at least he went. A more bonafide hero was my friend Roland, a graduate student in biochemistry. He was so outraged by the Nazi horror that when war came he went to Canada and enlisted in the Royal Canadian Air Force.

Because of his background he was put into the medical service. He participated in the bloody parts of many battles. And then, again because of his background, he was transferred to Pasture Institute. There he did yoman service in essential war research while the bombs fell all around.

When his four-year enlistment ended as the war was grinding to a close the chancellor called him in: "Here is your discharge and your travel papers," he said. And then he handed him another paper. "Don't tell anyone in Britain that Pasture Institute gave a doctorate to a Yankee enlisted man in time of war."

So Roland came home with a doctorate and a war-related digestive disorder that lasted several years. He is now a respected professor.

Should we remember our friends and neighbors who gave their best, often beyond the call of duty, and who are still with us? I think so.

And we should not forget the young, young men who gave their lives or part of their lives in Vietnam, that war without patriotic passion.

And we should not forget our history. We should not forget the crazy Yankees who charged up Missionary Ridge in the face of withering fire from cannon and muskets and took the Confederate stronghold with hot lead and cold steel. And a thousand other such battles.

There are those who argue with more virtue than realism that the time for war has passed. Be that as it may, we cannot afford to forget those who gave their lives or even part of their lives in defense of America and its radically beautiful ideals.

WHO READS THESE BIBLES?

Sinning pastor returning to pulpit

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — The Rev. Robert Bast, convicted of a sexual misdemeanor, will return to the pulpit at Garfield Park Reformed Church on June 5, officials said Friday.

Gaylord Anderson, vice president of the consistory of the church, said the governing body voted unanimously to allow the 41-year-old pastor to return.

The minister was among 22 persons arrested in April as police cracked down on prostitutes and their customers. The 22 men all were charged with soliciting for prostitution.

The Rev. Mr. Bast first pleaded innocent, but told his congregation he had sinned. On May 12 he changed his plea to no contest and was fined $100, plus $10 for court costs.

Anderson said the decision was reached May 17. But he said it was not made public while local officials waited for action by the classis, governing body for the entire Reformed Church in America.

The classis met Tuesday, Anderson said, and agreed to allow the minister to return. Anderson said he could provide no details of the classis' action.

When Anderson was asked if a 30-day leave of absence imposed by local church officials after the arrest would be the only church penalty for the Rev. Mr. Bast, he replied: "Only time will tell. No body can tell what will happen six months down the road."

Police said the minister was arrested after he approached two police women posing as prostitutes. His comments to the women were recorded by police.

AFTER THE arrest, the Rev. Mr. Bast resigned from the pastoral post he had held six years. But church officials imposed the leave of absence while deciding if they would accept his resignation.

The first Sunday after his arrest, the minister returned to his pulpit briefly to tell a weeping, applauding congregation he had sinned. His brief remarks rebuking himself drew a standing ovation.

Some church officials, including the assistant pastor, insisted afterward that what happened to their minister was a test of the church's ability to forgive.

Anti-gay group suffers setback

MIAMI (KNS) — Efforts to force 14 Miami-area broadcasting firms to accept advertising from the anti-gay rights organization "Save Our Children" (SOC) were blocked in federal court Friday.

U.S. District Judge Sidney M. Aronovitz ruled that he does not have the authority to force two TV stations and 12 radio stations to accept the advertising supporting repeal of Dade County's so-called "gay rights" ordinance.

The ordinance prevents discrimination based on sexual or affectional preferences in housing, jobs and private schools.

The ruling followed a one-hour, sometimes emotional hearing in which SOC attorney Robert Brake charged that the broadcasters are following "fascist policies by censoring us off the air."

Salvationists train starkly

Booth died blind and still by faith he trod,
Eyes still dazzled by the ways of God.
Booth led boldly and he looked the chief,
Eagle countenance in sharp relief,
Beard a-flying, air of high command
Unabated in that holy land.
— from "General William Booth Enters into Heaven," by Yachel Lindsay.

By Nikki Finke
Associated Press Writer

SUFFERN, N.Y. (AP) — It could be a dormitory on any pastoral college campus. Students in faded denim are sweeping the floors, studying in out-of-the-way corners and eating sandwiches on the run. But these clean-cut men and women change into drab blue uniforms for class. They don't smoke, don't drink and must marry each other. They are cadets in the Salvation Army.

"There's a certain batch of people who think we're a little odd, maybe even weirdo. But God wants us to do this. That's why we're here," says Charlotte Lewis, 30, defending her decision to enter the austere, disciplined life of the officers training school here.

To outsiders, the Salvation Army conjures up images of soapbox preachers, brass bands, Christmas kettles, free soup, and those funny little bonnets the women all wear.

To its officers and members, it is a multi-faceted social welfare and Christian evangelical ministry operating throughout 82 countries and territories on every continent in the world.

Like the do-gooders in the musical "Guys and Dolls" who try to reform the gambling ways of Nathan Detroit and his pals, Salvationists encounter both respect and scorn when tangling with the 20th Century.

Yet their officer training schools continue to attract hundreds of applications each year — far greater than the number of openings available, according to Suffern school director Maj. Roy M. Oldford.

"These are healthy normal men and women. They don't see themselves as zealots or Jesus freaks. They know the Salvation Army is an instrument to serve people, and it's the right one," Oldford said.

Most of the 106 cadets here seem curiously removed from the tumultuous 1960's when other young people their age were experimenting with political radicalism, drugs and permissive sexual mores.

Stephen Banfield, 24, admits he suffered the growing pains of "being different" in his tiny hometown of Sandford, Maine, where peer pressure dictated that every-one look and act alike.

"I guess I was about nine. The little kid next door told me he was an honor junior soldier in the Salvation Army and one day he came home wearing this neat army cap. That's when I really got interested," said the slim, athletic cadet who would have fit in easily at West Point.

Banfield's own family had stopped going to church several years before. But he became an active Salvationist, going to Sunday services and working as a counselor in the army's summer camps.

"Because it was such a small town, there was really no one else in my high school who was a member of the Salvation Army. Sure, I'd get kidding remarks like, 'Here, take my old clothes,' and that type of thing. You know, the misconceptions."

"But in my really close friends, there was a respect. I guess their parents had told them about the work of the Salvation Army, the real work, and the fathers had talked about the doughnuts in the war. They had quite a respect for me. I was really surprised."

Banfield's wife, Janet, is a fourth-generation Salvationist and a cadet at the school. According to regulations, marrying an outsider would mean leaving the army's ranks.

"It certainly cuts down the field," laughed Miss Lewis, a bubbly redhead who is single. She can date only with the permission of her chief side officer, the equivalent of a dean of women.

According to the army's regulations, the wife always takes on the rank of her husband, no matter if it is higher or lower than her own. Her husband receives the couple's appointment, and she must follow him.

"I don't think there are any built-in biases toward women," said Mrs. Banfield, 22, as she smoothed her long brown hair knotted neatly in a bun. "I do everything a man does. I preach, I lead meetings and I sing."

Women, as well as men, are ordained ministers when they complete the two-year program at one of four training schools in the country. Tuition is $770 for the entire program, including room and board.

GOINGS ON

"Noah's Ark and the Genesis Flood," a film, will be shown Sunday, 6 p.m., at Wrigley Baptist Church, 32nd Street and Magnolia Avenue. This is not the film that was shown recently in theaters.

Destiny, a musical group from Christian Heritage College of San Diego, will present a concert Sunday, 6 p.m., at Bellflower Baptist Church, 17456 Downey Ave., Bellflower. Christian Heritage is a four-year liberal arts college specializing in Christian training, science, arts and missionary aviation.

Parable, a music group, will be in concert Sunday, 7 p.m., at Immanuel Baptist Church, 3215 E. Third St.

Dr. Kenneth Stewart, former president of Pacific Christian College, will bring the message Sunday, 10:45 a.m., at First Christian Church, Fifth Street and Locust Avenue.

Dr. Robert H. Schuller, pastor of Garden Grove Community Church, Chapman Avenue and Lewis Street, has returned from an 18-day journey to the Far East and will speak at the 9:30 and 11 a.m. and the 7:30 p.m. services. Dorothy Benham, Miss America 1977, will speak and sing at the 9:30 and 11:15 a.m. services.

Please, please give full information in items sent in for the "Goings on" column. One item was eliminated this week because it did not give the time, the date and the address of the church. "Goings on" news should be on the Religion Editor's desk before Thursday noon.

As officers, Salvationists receive only $50 a week in living allowance although housing, transportation, medical benefits and child support are paid for by the non-profit organization.

"Self-denial, discipline and teamwork are necessary qualities among officers and cadets alike," reads the Salvation Army cadets' manual.

The cadets' daily schedule begins at 6:45 a.m. with a rising bell, includes time for daily prayer and meditation, and ends at 11:00 p.m. when they return to quarters — a Spartan room with bed and bureau.

The courses, mostly Bible-centered, offer instruction on everything from "soul-winning" methods to sermon delivery and preparation.

One course, entitled "Woman Officer as Hostess," includes practice in etiquette, table-setting and meal planning.

The Salvation Army was founded in London in 1865 by William Booth, a Methodist minister, who was thrown out of an East End church when he tried to bring his newly converted street bums and outcasts inside.

Booth and his rag-tag band of volunteers broke away from accepted religious practices and held their meetings in tents, rented halls or out on the street.

His philosophy, as it evolved, was "you can't talk to someone about their soul if he's got an empty stomach." So his followers satisfied the poor's physical needs before preaching spiritual salvation.

Soup kitchens, alcoholic treatment centers and founding shelters soon blossomed. The Salvation Army also operates missing persons bureaus, leper colonies and an extensive disaster relief network.

Worldwide, the organization has about 25,000

People, ideas

the pastors have never heard of the Book.

And yet, the Bible is big business. Almost every year brings forth a new translation. The publishers wouldn't do this if there weren't dollars in it.

It would take a space much larger than is available to just list the Bibles in English and the study and reference Bibles. I have seen no comment about what is going on in other European-language countries.

The Bible people constantly seek out new frontiers. The Wycliffe Translators, for example, send dedicated academic people to unknown tribes where, sometimes in mortal danger, they learn the language and make translations. This isn't easy.

You don't learn the unwritten language of a small tribe in the Andes the way you would learn Spanish or even Russian.

But they do learn and translate into written words and tape recorders. Sometimes the achievement is minor, just a few pages from the Gospels. But they bring the Good News.

In English, the King James Version, despite its inadequacies, remains the best-selling Bible. King James I of England commissioned 50 scholars to make a translation. (There had been earlier, unsatisfactory translations.) The scholars were a motley crew, some of them of dubious morals, but they were Renaissance gentlemen with a true ear for poetry. They worked under a handicap because many of the manuscripts were in the Vatican or with the Greek Orthodox.

The book, dedicated to the discomfit of "Papists, dissenters and other heretics," was published in 1611. There have been several revisions, but the old book with its archaic language remains strong.

The New English Bible, 1970, is the work of many British scholars. It is easy to read. The faults of the King James Version have been largely corrected because of the greater availability of manuscripts. This reader feels that the Old Testament becomes clearer. The gentlemen of King James knew their Greek well so the changes in the New Testament are minor. Many readers will prefer the archaic language of the old version.

There are so many versions. "The Living Bible (Paraphrased)" is not to my taste. It is a paraphrase by Kenneth N. Taylor and in my opinion reflects the biases of the editor. But its sale is fantastic. The publisher, Tyndale House, has had to enlarge its operation.

The Good News Bible, written in everyday, natural English, is a best seller. It may be obtained in inexpensive paperback.

The Jerusalem Bible, translated by Roman Catholic scholars, is highly respected.

There are so many others — and there is the mountainous pile of study and reference Bibles.

Which brings us back to the original question: Who reads all these Bibles?

WASHINGTON'S NIGHTMARE
Just imagine George Washington asleep in a snowbound tent before a battle. He sees in a dream the future of the America he is trying to establish by his sword. In lightning flashes he glimpses roaring freeways, teeming slums, the luxurious idleness of darlings of fortune. He sees the liberties for which he was fighting eroded by apathy.

On awakening he might have thought of breaking his sword and going back to his cotton and tobacco fields.

The future is always a bit horrid until we get to it. Then somehow we manage to live with it, often with a measure of contentment and zest.

PROFESSIONAL RELIGIOUS

"Nasty Habits," a nasty burlesque about Watergate, involves nuns of a sort never seen on this earth. Many Catholics are up in arms. Well they should be.

Monks and nuns have always been under a shadow of suspicion because monasteries and convents are such very private places. It is natural to wonder what people are up to when you can't watch them. The malicious, including some Catholics, make up gossip. This is no new thing. It was going on 1,000 years ago.

The professional religious are not perfect, but they have made a difficult assertion of personal purpose. If one fails or even seems to be near failure, the gossip mongers have their day.

I have met a number of priests and nuns. I have nothing but praise for the ones I have known. I found them gentle, courteous and sometimes wise. I have received acts of kindness which were not requested and were beyond the call of duty.

I'm sure they have their faults. Neither are all soldiers brave. But I, for one, am glad that there are monks and nuns in the world. They are trying to tell us something we ought to know.

Citation

Dr. Cecil E. Hoffman, founder of the UC Irvine Interfaith Foundation, has been awarded UCI's Citation of merit. The Presbyterian minister organized the foundation at the opening of the campus in 1965. Dr. Hoffman is now retired but continues to serve as a counselor.

Soldiers of Christ

Stephen Banfield, 24, and his wife, Janet, 22, admire the bust of General William Booth, founder of the Salvation Army. The couple are cadets in Suffern, N.Y., one of the four Salvation Army "West Points" in the United States. In some respects the discipline is more strict than that of the military Army.

POSITIVE THINKING

by Norman Vincent Peale

Getting people to like you

Everyone wants to be liked. No person can experience rejection and be happy. It is a strong human desire to be appreciated.

I see a continual parade of tired, discontented, unhappy people whose first complaint always seems to be: "Nobody seems to like me. I feel rejected. How can I get people to like me?"

Perhaps a key to this important human problem is expressed in that one little word: me. These people are short of friends because they spend their time thinking me instead of you; they have become increasingly self-centered rather than part of their group and their community.

Because this question has come up so often, I have given it a lot of thought and prepared a card with ten rules for getting the esteem of others. I gave this card to those who seemed to have the problem of not being liked. Perhaps these rules can help you if you feel sort of "out of it." If not, you may want to pass them on to a friend who can make use of them.

They are very simple rules — and they emphasize the you instead of the me attitude.

First: Learn to remember names. Inefficiency or unconcern at this point may indicate that your interest in the other person is not sufficiently outgoing. A person's name is very important to an individual. You give a compliment by remembering a name.

Second: Be a comfortable kind of individual so there is no strain in being with you. Condition yourself so that others will say, "Here is my kind of person." Be homey.

Third: Acquire the quality of relaxed easiness so that people also feel relaxed when with you.

Fourth: Don't be egotistical. Guard against giving the impression you know it all. Be natural and genuinely humble.

Fifth: Be informed and cultivate the quality of being stimulating and interesting so that people will want to be with you because they get something from you.

Sixth: Eliminate the factors from your personality which tend to turn people off.

Seventh: Sincerely attempt to heal every misunderstanding you have had or now have. Drain off your grievances and forget them.

Eighth: Definitely practice liking people until you learn to do so genuinely. Be like Will Rogers who said, "I never met a man I didn't like." Try to be that way.

Ninth: Never miss an opportunity to say a word of congratulations upon anyone's achievement, or express sympathy in sorrow or disappointment.

Tenth: Get a quality in your personality that gives an upbeat even inspirational feeling to other people. They will love you for it.

These ten principles are based on sound psychology and will increase your understanding of human responses. They will work when worked. Actually they are in essence what is sometimes called the "golden rule": "Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them."

A sincere practice of that principle is the best of all ways of getting people to like you. On this personal relations system you will never lack friends.

Jewish reply

Mark Clutter, Religion Editor of the Long Beach I-P-T (May 21, 1977) once again puts his foot in his mouth on the subject of Jewish-Christian relations. In his article he contends that the roots of Christian anti-Semitism lie not in Christian theology or Christian church behavior, but rather in a "very understandable cultural conflict" caused by cosmopolitan Jews intruding into bucolic Christian communities where the Christian inhabitants were fearful of strangers. Clutter's view is a gross distortion of history.

Has he not heard of the consistent anti-Semitism promoted by Christian Church Fathers, such as emperors Theodosius and Justinian, in the fifth and sixth centuries, C.E., which included doing everything they could to make the practice of Judaism very difficult? Has he not heard of the Council of Christian churchmen at Nicaea in the year 325, C.E., which imposed a form of apartheid upon the Jews of that time? Has he not heard of the efforts by Christian clergy to persuade the Roman government of the fourth century to outlaw the practice of Judaism? Has Mr. Clutter not heard about the Christian Crusaders who prepared themselves for the Crusades by preaching and practicing the war cry: "Kill a Jew and save your soul?" And what about the Inquisition, which was essentially an organized, premeditated, Church-sponsored and Church-administered policy on a parallel with Hitler's "Final Solution."

It is a disservice to interfaith efforts in the Long Beach community for the Religion Editor of the Independent Press-Telegram to characterize this history as "an ancient libel as unworthy of belief as 'The Protocols of the Learned Elders of Zion.'" The roots of anti-Semitism lie, not in the soil of decent and enlightened Christian communities of America, but in the soil of a Europe soaked with innocent Jewish blood. For, as it is written on the memorial marker at the site of Bergen-Belsen, "Earth Conceal Not the Blood Shed on Thee!"

Sidney Baldwin, Chairman
Community Relations Committee of the Long Beach Jewish Federation

Editor's note: Of course, any brief comment on a very large subject is likely to be too simple. The truth, however, remains that to be anti-Jewish is to be anti-Christian. Whatever the mistakes of our ancestors, a Christian today who is anti-Jewish has betrayed his faith and doctrine. Incidentally, the Inquisition was not anti-Jewish but anti-heretic. Many Christians died in the flames.

Pro and Con

Ever since it happened centuries ago, there has been this pro and con about the Jews crucifying Christ. Was it not ordained that Jesus was to be crucified?

Thus it was, the will of God.

How do others feel about this? No harm in asking questions. The answers could be interesting.

Faithfully,
(Mrs.) Anne Fickes

Hatred

Recently I was sent to a hospital here in Long Beach and unfortunately, shared a room with an Evangelist. She asked each person who entered the room whether he or she was a Christian and handed out leaflets, tracts, ads for services and religious gatherings, etc. She found out immediately that I was Jewish, firm in my belief and could not be converted to her particular sect. The pressure grew unpleasant since it was always in her conversation. She knew definitely that she had a special seat waiting for her in heaven, she was one of the Chosen People, and everyone else was absolutely going straight to Hell. Although she constantly talked love, love, love, she was cruel and spread hate throughout the hospital. One of the aides whom I considered very friendly, asked me why everyone hates the Jews. I answered "You Tell Me." I really wished to know. If the churches preach such derogatory things, it is a great injustice. There are hundreds of religions that teach good in the world and they should not be condemned unnecessarily. I'll have to go to a nursing home some day and I do hope I'll get companionable people that don't pressure others with hatred in my declining years.

History

In your editorial of 21 May you take issue with a reader for his opinion that "anti-Semitism is an essential and basic part of Christianity." As you correctly mentioned, antisemitism existed outside of the Christian context in the Roman Empire and in pre-Christian European tribal cultures. Also, Islam has its own history of anti-Jewish persecution. However, the great spiritual tragedy of Christianity is the fact that, with respect to antisemitism, 19 centuries of Christianity made no difference. On the contrary! It was during the Christian era that antisemitism became inhumanly barbarous.

In my opinion it is the responsibility of Jews to sum up the meaning of that era, unimpressed by Christian claims, guided exclusively by our own experience. In terms of the Jewish experience in the lands of Christendom, the final result of that age is bankruptcy — the moral bankruptcy of Christian civilization and the spiritual bankruptcy of Christian religion. After 19 centuries of Christianity, the extermination of 6 million Jews, among them 1½ million children, carried out in cold blood in the very heart of Christian Europe, encouraged by the criminal silence of virtually all Christendom including that of an infallible Holy Father in Rome, was the natural culmination of that bankruptcy. A straight line leads from the first act of oppression against the Jews and Judaism in the 4th century to the Holocaust in the 20th.

In order to pacify the Christian conscience it is said that the Nazis were not Christians. But they were all children of Christians! They were the fruit of 19 centuries of Christianity — the logical fruit of violence and militancy, oppression and intolerance, hatred and persecution, which dominated European history for the 16 centuries since Constantine the Great. Without the hatred and contempt for the Jew planted by Christianity in the hearts of the multitude of its followers, Nazism's crime against the Jewish people could never have even been conceived, much less executed.

In his book, "The Anguish of the Jews," Father Edmund Flannery demonstrates some measure of realization of the Christian responsibility in the history of Jewish martyrdom. In considering the antisemitism of the Christian scriptures, the important question is how certain passages were understood by the populace, such as Revelation 2:9 and John 8:44. No matter what the deeper theological references to the Jews may be, for centuries Christians were reading: "Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites... ye serpents, ye generation of hell!" (Matthew 23:33) and were thinking of their Jewish neighbors. The Christian populace acted as was expected of the disciples of a Gregory of Nyssa, of a St. John Chrysostom, of an Agobard, an Amulo, an Innocent III, a Capistrano, a Paul IV, not to mention the lesser luminaries among the priests and monks who followed in their footsteps. What chance did the Pauline doctrine of tolerance have if even Gregory the Great, the most just among the popes, described the Jews in a manner "more close to a 4th century image of the Jews as a dark, blind and perverse unbeliever?" (Flannery). The mobs were the least responsible for the massacres; the moral responsibility must be placed squarely on the shoulders of those who taught them, guided them, led them.

Whereas the subject is inextinguishable, you may understand why Jews cannot help wondering whether Christianity, after all is said, is not by its fundamental doctrine bound to an anti-Judaic and anti-Jewish stance in history. I, too, wish the facts were different, Mr. Clutter, but wishing does not change history.

Sincerely, P. Hull

Shepherd

"Many Thanks" for the photo of Calvary Light Assembly in the paper May 14th. It brought to mind the many happy years my family worshipped there when my father-in-law, Herschel Phillips, was the pastor. I remember how joyfully he worked when the original structure was in construction and how much the congregation loved him. The church was then called "Guiding Light Tabernacle" a name he chose when he founded it, and it was there I found Jesus Christ as my personal Savior.

When Pastor Phillips died in the pulpit 10 years ago on Easter Sunday at the close of his sermon, we all lost an exceptional shepherd and a truly wonderful friend.

Minister

suspended

MT. POCONO, Pa. (AP) — Delegates to the South-eastern Pennsylvania Synod of the Lutheran Church in America have voted to suspend a pastor, the Rev. John B. Bergstresser, from the Lutheran ministry.

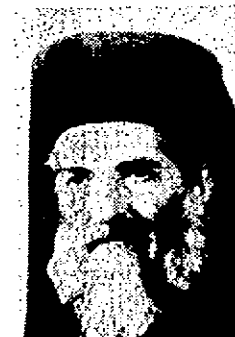

The action was taken after the Rev. Mr. Bergstresser, former pastor of Grace Lutheran Church in Royersford, was relieved of his post on the recommendation of a committee in a controversy over church funds, but who became pastor of a new independent congregation of dissidents who supported him, Freedom Lutheran Church, outside denominational jurisdiction.

Women OKed

SASKATOON, Canada (AP) — A joint commission of three Canadian Lutheran denominations planning unification has approved a proposal allowing the ordination of the women in the projected new church.

New pastor

James D. Brun, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Brun, Long Beach, will be ordained at Our Saviour's Lutheran Church on June 19. He is a graduate of Wartburg Theological Seminary this month. He will be installed as pastor of Zion Evangelical Lutheran Church in Atalissa, Iowa, on June 26. He married Ruth E. Mortensen, formerly of Rolling Hills Estates.

Patriarch

Elias IV of Antioch, patriarch of 3.5 million Christians in Moslem countries, is a visitor in the United States where he is seeking to build better understanding with American churchmen. Antioch is one of the oldest of Christian communities.

Angola revolt said crushed

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Angola's Marxist President Agostinho Neto said Friday his forces had crushed a revolt by army extremists after street fighting that killed many men and women.

In a radio address monitored here, Neto gave no details of the fighting but said "drastic measures" would be taken to prevent further disorders in his central African country.

NETO identified the coup leaders as former Interior Minister Nito Alves and former political commissar Jose Van Dunem, jailed since last Saturday, when they were purged from the ruling Popular Front for the Liberation of Angola — MPLA.

Western observers say the two are pro-Moscow hardliners opposed to Neto's plans for attracting Western investments and reducing dependence on the Soviet bloc.

Neto said the rebels had "misinterpreted" his ideology and that those responsible for the revolt would be punished "with utmost severity."

In Portugal, the national news agency ANOP reported Alves may have been killed in the fighting and said that official Angolan spokesmen would neither confirm nor deny rumors he was dead.

There was no indication whether Neto's Soviet advisers or the 10,000-15,000 Cuban troops stationed in the former Portuguese colony played any part in the day's events. The Cubans remained in Angola after helping the MPLA defeat two pro-Western groups in the 1975 Angolan civil war.

A correspondent for the Yugoslav news agency Tanjug quoted a Cuban soldier checking identification papers as saying "the reaction has been overcome, what else."

THE SOVIET news agency Tass reported the uprising was staged by forces of "imperialism and internal reaction."

the rebels had seized the radio station and attempted to storm the presidential palace, army headquarters and the city prison before being "totally crushed."

In addition to factional strife within his own party, Neto is waging a small-scale guerrilla war against remnants of his twocivil war opponents — the National Front for the Liberation of Angola and the National Union for the Total Liberation of Angola — still active in rural areas.

Dispute brings power balance into focus

S. Korea has manpower edge

Washington Star

WASHINGTON — The U.S. officer looked at the map of the Korean peninsula and shook his head over the problem faced by defenders in the South.

"Two-thirds of the North Korean army is sitting 45 miles away," he said, referring to the divisions positioned north of the Demilitarized Zone that divides the peninsula into two nations. "They're in a position where they could move very quickly."

THE NEW controversy over how long U.S. ground forces will be needed in Korea to deter or help defend against such a movement has generated fresh information about how these two potential combatants stack up against each other.

In recent years, particularly in the last year, the North Koreans are said to have made strides in improving military capability.

The over-all balance favors South Korea in military manpower, but North Korea in firepower. The Carter administration's decision to withdraw all U.S. ground troops over the next four to five years while keeping U.S. air and sea weapons in the country would seem to reflect that overall assessment.

The argument now in full voice in Congress concerns whether the military facts behind the generalities justify the withdrawal policy.

South Korea has 625,000 men in uniform, including an army of 560,000. The Republic of Korea (ROK) army is more experienced than its counterpart in the north because of the two divisions that fought in Vietnam. U.S. defense sources say the North Korean army numbers 440,000 men.

While the South has more soldiers, the North has more armor, a fact which particularly bothers Maj. Gen. John Singlaub. Singlaub is the Army general President Carter yanked from the Korean command for his publicly expressed fears that U.S. ground troop withdrawal would mean a new war.

SINGLAUB has told a House subcommittee that new intelligence ought to change the Carter policy. He mentioned that within the last year estimates of North Korean tank strength have risen from 500 to around 2,000.

Defense officials have essentially confirmed that statement, saying the North Koreans have about 1,950 tanks. The tank force fielded by the South was said to number about 1,000 medium tanks.

In the air, the North Korean edge is more pronounced. U.S. intelligence estimates the North has 655 combat planes, including 120 capable MIG21s, 110 MIG19s and 320 very old MIG15s and MIG17s. The rest of its combat air complement consists of fighter-bombers and light bombers.

Against that array, the South Koreans can put up 36 F4 fighter-bombers (another 18 are on order), 70 U.S.-made F5 fighters, which are small planes designed solely for export by the United States, and 100 F86 Saber jets, which are of the same generation as North Korea's older MIGs.

The U.S. Air Force has three squadrons of F4s in Korea, which contain approximately 70 planes. Additionally, it has a squadron of some 15 observation planes in the country.

THESE FORCES could be reinforced with U.S. planes from Okinawa, the Philippines and Guam, where the U.S. stations its B52 bombers for the Pacific theater. The capability of the big bombers figures heavily in plans for turning back any invasion from North Korea.

The North Koreans have a navy, including perhaps a dozen submarines and many swift, missile-equipped patrol boats, designed to deny South Korea the seaborne supplies it would need in time of war.

The South Korean navy, which has no submarines, has sub-killing destroyers among its ships, but it is still outnumbered and outgunned at sea.

Insofar as U.S. ground troops are concerned, some U.S. analysts are betting that, at least in the short term, there will be no provocative incidents such as the deadly attack on two U.S. officers in the DMZ last August. The reason: Kim wants Americans out of South Korea. At least, says one officer, "That's the logic, but we're not inside his head."

Carter, Saudi to work on friends—for peace

WASHINGTON (AP) — The crown prince of Saudi Arabia left Washington Friday with an agreement with President Carter that, despite the confused Israeli election situation, their two countries will work hard on their Middle East friends to try to achieve a peace settlement.

Carter appeared to be working on Israel, which is dependent on the United States for economic aid and military equipment, by reiterating at his news conference Thursday the need for a withdrawal from 1967 Israeli conquests of Arab territory.

THE SAUDIS are expected to continue their quiet diplomacy, backed by the financial support which they provide to Israel's neighbors, by trying to work out the Palestinian refugee side of any peace plan.

The leader of the winning political party in last week's Israeli parliamentary elections, Menachem Begin, has opposed yielding captured territory to the Palestinians for their own homeland. This seemed to harden the deadlock.

But Carter and Crown Prince Fahd Bin Abd Al-Aziz Al-Saud were reported by a high Saudi source to have agreed that it was unwise to allow the Israeli domestic political situation to become an obstacle to progress toward a settlement. Although senior U.S. officials saw little chance of meaningful developments until a new government is formed in Israel, presumably by Begin, efforts would be made.

Carter indicated he would put pressure on Begin and that congressional leaders and Jewish Americans also would try to get him to take a more moderate position on giving up land to the Palestinians.

"I think this may have an effect on him," Carter said. "I have already seen some moderation in his views as he has dealt with" other political parties whose support Begin is seeking in order to form a governing coalition.

"I hope that this moderation will continue," the President said.

Balancing that, Carter added that, "obviously, the Arab leaders also have to be moderate. Some of the adamant stands they have taken in the historical past will have to be abandoned. If they didn't, there would be no hope for peace."

"So both sides of this, or rather all sides of this discussion, have to yield to some degree to accomplish the purposes of their own people," Carter said.

Moshe Dayan quits Israeli Labor Party over new post

New York Times Service

JERUSALEM — Moshe Dayan quit the Labor Party Friday as furor over his acceptance of the foreign ministership in a prospective Likud government increased.

Liberals within the Likud bloc demanded the decision to name him be rescinded, and Simcha Erlich, head of the faction, called on Dayan to withdraw as the nominee because controversy over him has stalled efforts to form a coalition.

HOWEVER, aides to Menachem Begin, the Likud leader, who made the choice, said he still stood by his action and that he had been encouraged by some of the favorable response from abroad to the nomination. A leadership meeting has been called for Sunday to discuss the appointment and to try to stem a possible revolt within Likud.

Begin, who has been in a Tel Aviv hospital this week for treatment of chest pains, is expected to be released Sunday. He suffered a heart attack during the campaign for the elections of May 17, but his physicians say he has not had a recurrence.

Meanwhile, coalition talks with the new Democratic Movement for Change were at a standstill, and some members of the National Religious Party who had been receptive to Likud overtures earlier in the week were reported having second thoughts.

Likud liberals and others who objected to the appointment charged angrily that they had not been consulted. The liberals were also furious because one of their men, Arye Dulzin, head of the Jewish Agency, had been a leading contender for the foreign ministry post.

Dulzin himself told reporters, "The people chose Likud, not Dayan. He said the choice of a Labor Party member who had been Defense Minister in 1973 when Israeli forces were caught unprepared by the Arab attacks at the beginning of the October war was a "slap in the face to the Likud voter."

Although Dayan was cleared by an investigation after the war of personal responsibility for any lapses in preparedness, he was dropped from the cabinet in 1974 and has been in political eclipse since then.

THE Labor Party leadership greeted his acceptance of the Begin cabinet offer by demanding that he not only turn in his membership card, but that he also give up the Labor seat in Parliament that he won on May 17.

Dayan sent his card back but remained silent on his seat in Parliament. He is permitted to retain it as a one-man party.

TOASTERS, CHAMBER POTS PUT A LID ON $11 MILLION 'SALE OF CENTURY'

MENTMORE, England (AP) — The toast racks and chamber pots of Mentmore Towers stirred as much excitement Friday as its antique treasures had earlier. The "sale of the century" wound up with a total of nearly $11 million.

Sotheby's auctioneers said more than a dozen auction price records were set in the nine-day sale that drew hundreds of dealers and collectors from around the world to this hamlet 50 miles northwest of London.

Not only the antique collection that Baron Meyer de Rothschild gathered a century ago from palaces around Europe, but also the humbler contents of the 80-room house, helped pay taxes on the remainder of his heritage for another generation.

The baron's great-grandson, the seventh Earl of Rosebery, is selling the estate to meet inheritance taxes.

A Victorian seven-bar toast rack fetched $221, and a Minton china toilet set — chamber pot, three basins and two toothbrush holders — brought $212.50 in the sale's final session.

An American, determined not to go away empty-handed, had to pay $2,890 to get the last of the 2,700 items of the sale — a 1715 hot-chocolate pot embossed with cherubs and a Rosebery monogram.

Sale of some shabby horsehair mattresses for $25.50 each inspired the 62-year-old Dowager Countess of Rosebery to declare she would rather have had a raffle than see such prices paid for "rubbish."

GM to stop branding engines in aftermath of 'swap' furor

New York Times Service

DETROIT — After years of allowing its five car divisions to place their brand names on engines inside their cars, the General Motors Corp. has decided to drop the practice starting with its 1978 model cars.

The decision has been made in principle and as such no public confirmation or denial of it could be obtained Friday from company officials. Director of news relations, Clifford D. Merriott said that the company position was "We aren't going to talk '78 plans until the '78 models are ready." That will be later this summer. However, several knowledgeable persons within the company and reliably informed outsiders said that what is ahead is working out the finite details of such a fundamental decision that could significantly change GM's marketing approaches.

The move is apparently another step by the giant automaker to assure the public that it has no intention of misleading car buyers who may purchase a car with one brand name with an engine made by another GM division.

More importantly, those familiar with the situation said, is the desire of the company to avoid litigation over any labeling of engines in its 1978 model cars.

The company has come under a rising tide of litigation in recent months since the Illinois state attorney general filed suit against the company on behalf of a Chicago man who had purchased a 1977 Oldsmobile Delta 88 only to find the engine had been made by GM's Chevrolet Division.

As of Friday, according to the public information office at GM headquarters here, the number of legal actions against the company has risen to 67. Meanwhile four others have been resolved, including one brought by the state of New York.

Last week, following the annual meeting of GM shareholders during which company executives were grilled over the so-called engine switching controversy, Elliot M. Estes, GM president, said in response to a question about dropping the labeling of engines that the decision was being weighed by various car divisions that use labeling of some sort.

Since Estes' comments following the company's annual meeting, it has been learned that the Chevrolet division, which has rarely used labels anyway, has concluded that engines should not be labeled. It could not be determined what the conclusions of other divisions were, however one division official said the 1978 models would simply bear a label identifying the engines as made by General Motors.

FHA, VA hike rate on home mortgage loans

WASHINGTON (AP) — The maximum allowable interest rate for Federal Housing Administration-insured single-family mortgage loans will rise from 8 per cent to 8.5 per cent next Tuesday, the Department of Housing and Urban Development announced Friday.

The Veterans Administration also announced a similar change in the maximum rate of VA home mortgage loans.

The allowable rate on multi-family mortgage loans will stay at 9 per cent.

HUD Secretary Patricia Roberts Harris said the new single-family figure was determined after consulting with VA Administrator Max Cleland. She called the increase necessary to bring FHA rates in line with competitive ones in the mortgage and financial markets.

"Higher FHA and VA interest ceilings will make it easier for people who are trying to sell their homes," said Kennon V. Rothchild, president of the Mortgage Bankers Association of America.

"It cuts the loan discount that the homeowner has had to pay and should make more government-backed mortgage financing available to home buyers."

Carter said bypassing laws, Congress on nuclear policies

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration may be circumventing the law in its efforts to redirect the nation's nuclear energy program, both the chairman and ranking Republican member of the Senate Energy Committee said Friday.

The pair, committee chairman Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., and Sen. Clifford P. Hansen, R-Wyo., asked the General Accounting Office to investigate whether the administration is changing nuclear policy without consulting Congress.

The GAO is an investigatory and auditing branch of Congress.

In a letter to GAO Comptroller Gen. Elmer Staats, Jackson and Hansen said that the Energy Research and Development Administration appears to be moving ahead on nuclear policy actions recommended by the President.

This might violate two laws that require advance notice to Congress on major spending and policy changes, they suggested.

One is the Impoundment Control Act, which prohibits presidents from withholding funds appropriated by Congress except under certain specified procedures. The other is the Atomic Energy Act, which prohibits nuclear policy from being changed without notification to Congress.

"Major changes, including terminations of ongoing subprograms, apparently are under way in the uranium enrichment program, the fuel cycle program, the Liquid Metal Fast Breeder Reactor and the waste management program," the senators said.

But they said that to date Congress has received formal notification from Carter with regard to only one project — his decision to cancel work on the controversial breeder reactor program at Clinch River.

The administration's nuclear program calls for a slowdown of all projects involving the plutonium fuel cycle. Carter has claimed that plutonium can be too easily diverted for use in atomic weapons, either by foreign governments or by terrorist groups.

He said he was proposing such a course in an effort to impede the spread of weapon-suitable nuclear materials and hoped other nations would follow the example.

Jackson and Hansen said the ERDA appears to be modifying ongoing programs to match this philosophy. "We are concerned that any such changes in the current fiscal year will effectively preempt congressional participation in these major nuclear research decisions," Jackson and Hansen told the GAO.

"We consider this a matter of urgency to insure that the congressional prerogative in the (upcoming) fiscal year 1978 nuclear decisions is preserved and is not preempted by an unauthorized budget action in fiscal year 1977," they said.

War' opens on oil firms' divestitures

By John Sheehan
Staff Writer

Urged on by some Carter administration officials, Democrats in Congress are ready to open a "second front" in the battle to prevent U.S. oil companies from acquiring energy sources other than petroleum. It's all part of the decade-long war between government and the oil industry called "divestiture" — forcing oil companies to surrender their grip on not only oil-based products, which they control from wellhead to gas pump, but other energy sources as well.

The outburst from Capitol Hill illustrates a growing concern in Washington — that major U.S. oil companies may throw a hammerlock on competing energy sources, including coal, nuclear power and geothermal energy.

OIL INDUSTRY critics on the Hill and elsewhere say that without preventive action now, oil companies' control of these alternate sources could reduce competition, delay development and squeeze the consumer's wallet even further.

Proposed legislative action would not only keep the oil companies from entering competing lines, but would also force them to sell any such operations they already have.

This type of action is called "horizontal divestiture," a form of cross-ownership, which is distinct from "vertical divestiture" — splitting up a company's control of production, refining and marketing.

Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., chairman of the House Interior Committee, and 20 other House members have introduced such legislation. Hearings are expected sometime this year.

However, advocates of horizontal divestiture may strike with their own "blitzkrieg" before then.

LEGISLATIVE sources say the advocates may move on either the House or Senate floors to tack such an amendment onto some bill — "it doesn't matter which," said one — designed to carry out Carter's wide-ranging energy proposals.

Oilmen, viewing the possibility with outright alarm, see this current legislative push as the greatest threat to their industry since the breakup of John D. Rockefeller's Standard Oil trust in 1911.

Thus, oil lobbyists are burning their own midnight oil these evenings cranking out reams of pamphlets and advertisements that argue against what they call "dismemberment" of their industry.

Essentially, they say, oil companies have truly become "energy companies," that they are aggressively promoting development of all fuels, and that their capital and expertise are needed to permit expansion of energy sources other than oil.

Nobody blames them — the oil companies have a lot at stake in the fight over horizontal divestiture.

Since the 1960s, oil companies have expanded even further into other energy lines, including coal, nuclear fuel, synthetic gas, and solar and geothermal energy.

OIL COMPANIES now provide about one-fifth of U.S. coal production and about one-third of uranium output. Exxon, Gulf Oil Corp., Shell, Mobil Corp. and Continental Oil are just a few of the companies deeply entrenched in in non-petroleum energy operations.

For example, Continental owns Consolidated Coal Co., the second largest U.S. coal producer.

However, Carter has made clear his opposition to vertical divestiture through a legislated breakup of oil operations. Carter says he instead favors tougher laws of antitrust laws to increase competition.

Also, the Justice Department is considering whether oil-producing companies should even be allowed to operate their own pipelines.

On the more pressing issue of horizontal divestiture, Carter has stopped short of proposing legislation in this area but has nonetheless left the door open. His energy program unveiled last month expressed concern about oil company involvement in non-oil areas.

IF RESTRAINT of competition is found; and can't be remedied under law, according to the administration plan, then the President will propose new legislation.

Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus has taken a stronger stand — he favors horizontal divestiture because he sees a danger that big energy companies may control the pace of development and pricing of all types of fuel.

The strongest proponent of horizontal divestiture in the administration, however, is John O'Leary, director of the powerful Federal Energy Administration. Even though the President hasn't proposed such divestiture, O'Leary says, "We ought to have a good strong national debate on it!

It's a major public-policy question whether to let the oil companies, which have a lot of political clout, also have an enormous say in other energy areas.

"I'd rather see tough coal and uranium industries than one big homogeneous energy industry," O'Leary said.

DIVESTITURE advocates are counting on strong public support. They're hoping that general animosity toward the oil industry, dating back to the long gasoline station lines of 1973-74 — and reinforced by last winter's natural gas cutbacks — is still running high.

Numerous public opinion polls seem to bear them out.

Congressional proponents of divestiture say the need for action is urgent. Udall says that because of their ventures into other fields, "oil companies are increasingly able to make fundamental decisions about the prices and production levels of the energy resources which are the primary competitors of oil.

"If oil companies gain further control over the coal industry, they might well conclude that their overall profits would be maximized by keeping oil prices high and by restricting production of coal."

The industry's critics are pointing with alarm to oil company expansion into coal and other energy ventures. As recently as 10 years ago, oil companies were barely dabbling outside petroleum.

Carson firm nets gas savings

THE FIRM expects to save nearly 20 million cubic feet of gas annually, a 44 per cent reduction in gas usage, while saving $30,000 on its annual gas bill and increasing production 68 per cent.

Co., produces aluminum alloy ingots from selected scrap and scrap borings. The material is crushed, dried, melted in a large furnace, and final poured into ingots.

The company achieved its gas savings by installing more efficient equipment to dry and process the scrap before it is sent to the melting furnace.

Apex president Dan Moenich was presented an Industrial Concern award by officials of the

THE GAS company has made such awards since 1975 to industrial firms that have made significant contributions to energy conservation.

To date some 30 firms have made combined savings of nearly 5 billion cubic feet of gas annually — enough for one day's usage by all gas company customers.

Hugh Carter awarded solar heating, cooling design for SD high school

The Energy Research and Development Administration (ERDA) has awarded a $393,000 contract to the San Diego Unified School District for a solar heating and cooling system being designed by Hugh Carter Engineering Corp. of Garden Grove.

The system will go into the new University High School.

The contract is the fourth largest of the 80 announced by ERDA and the largest in the West.

Carter is designing the system to heat classrooms, administration building, gymnasium and domestic water, and to cool the administration building and classrooms.

The central plant system will cost a little over $1 million with the district providing 64 per cent and the balance from ERDA.

The ERDA contract is part of the agency's national program to demonstrate solar energy use in commercial nonresidential buildings.

The University City High School contract is the second part of a five-year ERDA demonstration program which started in 1975.

"This second series of commercial solar projects will take advantage of improvements in solar technology and also place specific emphasis on energy conservation techniques," said Dr. Henry H. Marvin, director of ERDA's Division of Solar Energy in Washington.

The 11 ERDA awards in California range from $450 for a fire station to the University City High School contract.

ERDA ALSO announced that University City High School has been selected to be among those projects equipped with monitoring systems to collect performance data. This information will be transferred directly into a central data processing and analysis operation at the IBM Systems Division in Huntsville, Ala.

Business News in Brief

The new board of directors and other officers of Hugh Carter Engineering Corp. in Garden Grove have been announced. On the board are Hugh C. Carter, chairman; David R. Snow, president; Gary E. Martin, executive vice president/treasurer; Joan E. McEwan, vice president, financial and John M. Bousterson, corporate secretary.

Eastern Airlines passenger tickets and reservations are now being handled exclusively through travel agents in the Long Beach/Southland area after closing its ticket offices. The airline has three non-stop flights daily from L.A. to Atlanta, connecting to many destinations in the South.

The 16-unit Travel King Motel at 809 W. Pacific Coast Hwy. in Long Beach has been sold by Florence Barnes for $200,000 to Dinesh and Lalita Patel. Riley Lacy and Associates of Anaheim handled the transaction.

Fugro, Inc., a Long Beach firm specializing in engineering geology and soils engineering with emphasis on nuclear power plants, industrial/military installations, dams/reservoirs and offshore installations, has selected Dr. Geoffrey Martin as head of its earthquake engineering and soil dynamics group. Dr. Martin comes from the University of Auckland, New Zealand.

Union Pacific Railroad has appointed Harvey J. Cormier district director of intermodal sales at Long Beach, and Donald E. Anderson and W. Brook Gifford as representatives-intermodal sales at Los Angeles and Long Beach.      ♣ ♣ ♣

Jock A. Begg, Long Beach State University alumnus, has been named investment counselor of Newport Equity Funds, Newport Center.

Rich Sontag, formerly of Long Beach, has joined Warner Electric Brake & Clutch Co., Beloit, Wis., as vice president-marketing. He had been national sales manager of Litton Medical Systems.

Richard L. Hammond, Cerritos, is on the field engineering staff of General Electric's Installation & Service Engineering Division, Schenectady, N.Y.

QM Phone Show opens

Exhibition of telephone and other communications equipment dating from the Queen Mary's seafaring years was added this week to growing number of displays now regularly shown during shipboard museum tours. Present to examine signaling gear were R. Parker Sullivan, president of exhibit-sponsoring General Telephone Co., left; Mrs. Ruth S. Todd, a member of the Queen Mary Tours and GenTel boards of directors; and Mayor Thomas C. Clark. Displayed in addition to ship's whistle, foreground, are radio receivers, a 1935-model microphone, lifeboat megaphone, voice amplifiers. A short film describing satellite communications also is offered as part of the presentation.

It is also beginning to unveil the elements of its plan for higher price supports on milk and other farm products, target prices, hopes for the creation of grain reserves and other programs to bolster stagnant farm incomes that promise to lift consumer prices in the future.

in Geneva earlier this month and said they had agreed on "a common framework" for negotiating a new SALT pact.

Carter spent three hours and 19 minutes under the Atlantic aboard the nuclear submarine, the USS Los Angeles. He said the ship operated in simulated conditions of war and conducted an emergency drill in which its nuclear reactor was "scrammed," or shut down without warning.

The President said the ship's officers and crew reacted superbly.

But five of the ship's crewmen didn't get a chance to display any reactions, saying that they were banished from the boat while Carter was aboard because they're too fat.

The five said they were assigned to temporary duty aboard another submarine, the Spadefish, and were kept below, out of sight, until Carter left Port Canaveral, they told reporters angrily.

Capt. Lawrence Burkhardt, a spokesman at the Canaveral submarine base, said the Los Angeles did not need its full crew for the Carter mission. So, he said, since "we wanted to present a good appearance," the crewmen judged most overweight were relieved for the day.

Carter, in turn, won praise for his ship-handling.

"With absolute certainty, I can say there is no finer ship in the world," Carter said. "It strengthened my own confidence in the superior capability of the people who manage our very crucial defense mechanism. I'm very proud of what I see. Its safety is superb."

The sub's officers and crew, he added, gave "a demonstration of leadership in its purest and most excellent form."

Carter noted particularly that in a simulated casualty drill, junior officers and crewmen took over the duties of their superiors without a flaw. The President declared: "I was very much impressed."

The commander-in-chief's onetime mentor and former Navy superior, Adm. Hyman G. Rickover, looked over Carter's shoulder as he handled the submarine. "He did a superb job," Rickover said of the President's performance at the helm.

As a young naval officer in the early 1950s, Carter had worked with Rickover on development of the nuclear submarine.

opment of the nuclear submarine.

THE ADMIRAL said Carter operated the submarine's bow planes and stern planes to guide it through the water at high speed. And the President handled the throttle of the nuclear plant when the ship was at top speed.

Rickover wouldn't say how fast that was, declaring only that it was "in excess of 20 knots."

He smiled and added that his protégé's achievements demonstrate "that any sailor or officer in the Navy can become President."

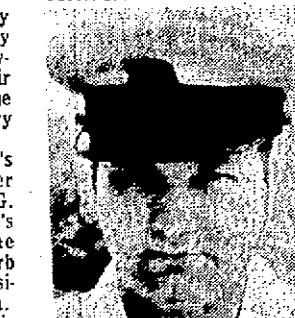

The President and Mrs. Carter and the snow-haired admiral rode the submarine into a dive in 100 fathoms, or 600 feet, of water 37 miles off the Florida coast. The sub surfaced at 3:15 p.m. EDT. Carter donned a black cap and foul-weather gear and stood on the sail as it returned to port.

Side by side, at two half-moon wheels in an array of instruments, the President operated bow planes and the First Lady operated stern planes as the craft maneuvered below.

Rickover took a turn at the bow plane with Carter alongside. At another point, the President took a large stainless steel wheel and guided the boat with Rickover looking over his shoulder. At still another point, he raised the periscope and peered through it.

When the submarine reached a depth of 200 feet, it made a simulated attack on a U.S. destroyer steaming nearby.

The President and the First Lady ate lunch with the ship's crew and Rickover dispensed with pomp and ceremony aboard. "I didn't go aboard to be treated as a high official," Carter said.

Last year she called an open-line radio broadcast and told surprised listeners she wanted to be "more than a rose in my husband's lapel. I'm not going to be locked away again as I have been in the past and told I'm not allowed to do anything because I have no rights."

In March, during a widely criticized visit to New York, Margaret was quoted by reporters from the Toronto Star and two British newspapers as saying, "After six years I have had enough. I abdicate."

At a formal reception in Washington early this year, she was the only woman not wearing a long dress. When asked about it, she said she did not "give a damn" about the reaction.

RUMORS of a separation became widespread after Margaret went to Toronto on March 5 for a recording session and performance by the Rolling Stones rock group and spent the weekend in the same hotel as the British Stones.

It was not a happy sixth wedding anniversary for Trudeau, who had taken the young Margaret as his bride in a quiet ceremony in Vancouver on March 4, 1971.

Last March 8, Margaret and Mick Jagger, the Stones lead singer, flew to New York on separate planes. Both Mrs. Trudeau and Jagger denied any romantic involvement.

Margaret, who stayed with Princess Yasmin Khan, daughter of actress Rita Hayworth and Aly Khan, during her time in New York, said she could not understand "where anyone would get the idea" she was having a romance with the singer.

JAGGER told reporters he flew to New York to visit his wife and daughter and added, "Margaret Trudeau is a very attractive person, but we are not having an affair."

The Trudeaus were last seen together publicly on May 16 at a Parliament Hill ceremony announcing plans for the Canada Summer Games in Newfoundland.

At that time they accepted a Newfoundland puppy for their sons — Justin Pierre, 5, Alexandre (Sacha) Emmanuel, 3, and Michel Charles-Emile, who will be 2 in October.

The next day, Margaret flew to New York to attend a ballet and then went to Washington for the White House press photographers' dinner as a guest of People magazine.

A BRIEF announcement on the separation from the prime minister's office said:

"Pierre and Margaret Trudeau announce that because of Margaret's wishes they shall begin living separate and apart."

"Margaret relinquishes all privileges as the wife of the Prime Minister and wishes to leave the marriage and pursue an independent career."

"Pierre will have custody of their three sons, giving Margaret generous access to them."

"Pierre accepts Margaret's decision with regret and both pray that their separation will lead to a better relationship between themselves."

Trudeau was a bachelor prime minister when he slipped away for the surprise marriage to Margaret Sinclair, daughter of a former federal fisheries minister.

SHE REMAINED quietly in the background until the 1974 general election, when she campaigned with her husband.

"He taught me a lot about loving," she told a televised election rally in her hometown of North Vancouver, B.C. She later told friends she had hoped Trudeau would lose and quit politics so they could have more time together.

Huntington Beach site looked at for new power plant

Huntington Beach is a possible site for a 1,200-megawatt Southern California Edison Co. power plant that would burn fuel similar to jet fuel.

The utility announced Friday that the site of its existing plant in Huntington Beach is one of four being considered for the new plant, that would cost between $750 million and $1 billion.

The three other sites are the company's existing facility at Ormond Beach south of Oxnard in Ventura County, an undeveloped site in the Lucerne Valley in San Bernardino County, or another undeveloped site west of Rosamond in the Kern County portion of the Antelope Valley, according to Thomas Reed, project director.

The facility would include three units, each using five turbines. Exhaust from the turbines would flow into water and create enough steam to operate a sixth generator.

The utility intends to file a notice of intent to build the plant with the State Energy Commission next month. If the commission grants approval, the plant could be in operation as early as 1985, Reed said.

Cocaine 'worth millions' was lost by U.S. Customs

Knight News Service

MIAMI — Millions of dollars worth of cocaine got lost somewhere between government keepers and the courts, a blistering U.S. Customs internal audit has concluded.

Fifteen pounds of cocaine, valued at $3.5 million, was lost between Customs and U.S. District Court, auditors reported after they scrutinized 93 drug seizures made in 1975.

Another cocaine haul worth $2.9 million may have been destroyed, but nobody really knows what happened after the Miami Customs seizure clerk took custody of the drug.

OTHER LOSSES in a total $7-million worth of missing narcotics, auditors said, involved small quantities of cocaine and marijuana that could not be fully accounted for.

The audit report, which Customs officials last month refused to volunteer to Knight-Ridder Newspapers, was made available by a confidential source.

His department is blameless, snapped James E. Townsend, Miami's district director of Customs, Thursday. "I swear we have audits more often than I change my underwear."

"We've run investigation after investigation, but there hasn't been a case of personnel malfeasance since I became district director in 1967. If there had been, I'd have been the first to pack the rogue off to Lewisburg (Penitentiary)."

TOWNSEND explained that agents take many seizures for destruction at a time, and sometimes find one missing. "Well, they get back, find it in the seizure room, and throw it in the river or flush it down the toilet. Maybe they signed off as having thrown it into the incinerator. That technicality is the kind of thing we're talking about."

Townsend said he had no specific recollection of the big cocaine discrepancies, uncovered more than a year ago. "We've got so many cases going," he said.

"The inadequacy of controls over seized drugs was called to your attention in previous reports," auditors scolded Townsend. "In effecting the seizure of hard drugs, your employees have exercised considerable initiative, ingenuity, hard work and dedication. These efforts should not be jeopardized or nullified by a relaxation of these standards after the drugs have been seized."

Of the 93 seizures scrutinized in 1975, the audit showed, 17 cases showed inadequate documentation of custody or destruction. Customs' Internal Review investigators could find no personnel culpable in the discrepancies, so the losses were presumed due to bookkeeping errors.

Of the $3.5-million worth of cocaine lost between Customs and U.S. District Court, the audit says only "the court, customarily, does not issue a receipt for seizures turned over to it. Consequently, the district office of Customs did not have proper support for disposition of the drugs."

THE EXPLANATION for the $2.9-million worth of cocaine lost from headquarters is contained in the audit in two sentences: "Seizure clerk receipted for cocaine on March 18, 1975. There is no evidence of disposition of this seizure."

raphers, including the founding of a Boy Scout troop for the purpose of making sex films.

Lloyd told of a recent case in Texas in which a "recruiting officer" allegedly abducted an 11-year-old boy and took him to Mexico to star in a pornographic film. The alleged recruiter had been heard boasting that a Mexican porno producer paid $25,000 for each fairskinned Anglo child delivered.

One man who was not allowed to speak before the committee was Tim O'Hara of the Guyon Society, a group whose motto is "Sex Before 8 Or Then It's Too Late."

"This is body guilt legislation," O'Hara told a reporter. He said there is no such thing as pornography, that he prefers to refer to such films as "child sex films."

Most child pornography is currently prosecuted under obscenity statutes, but police say successful prosecution is difficult.

"You have to show that the film is obscene by taking it to a magistrate, who views the film and gives you a yea or nay," Lt. Don La Guardia of the Los Angeles Police Department's child sexual exploitation unit said.

"After the magistrate makes a decision, the attorney can appeal. Even then, you have to go back to the distributor and ask him, 'Did you know this material was obscene?' He says, 'Gee, I didn't know that,' and he gets it off his shelves for awhile."

A similar hearing on juvenile pornography was also conducted in Chicago, and the New York Legislature has taken up the bill on a state level.

In Chicago, Acting Mayor Michael Bilandic told a Senate subcommittee on juvenile delinquency that federal legislation outlawing child pornography is "essential and urgently needed."

Local law enforcement is hampered because much of the child pornography industry involves interstate traffic which "urgently requires the legislative attention only Congress can provide," Bilandic said Friday.

In Albany, N.Y., the State Assembly passed a bill Thursday which would make it a felony to use children under the age of 16 in a "sexual performance."

probable opponent of Brown in next year's gubernatorial election, told the governor that a veto "would be an irresponsible act which cannot be disguised as a 'matter of conscience.'"

"There is little doubt," Younger wrote in a letter hand-delivered to Brown, "that at some point in the future California will have an effective death penalty statute. For the present, however, your veto will deprive the people of the protection of a death penalty statute and expose some of them to a risk of harm which they would not have faced had the death penalty law been in effect."

Deukmejian's bill would have authorized the penalty of death for persons convicted of first degree murder if one or more of 12 specifically cited "special circumstances" existed when the crime was committed.

The special circumstances include killing of a person known to be a police officer, murder by torture, murder by hire, murder by use of an explosive and murder during a robbery, home burglary, kidnapping, rape or sexual abuse of a child.

THE MEASURE contains an urgency clause, and would become effective immediately if the Legislature votes to override the governor's veto.

Dodgers blast Reds, 10-3 — lead by 13

By Gordon Verrell
Staff Writer

Sparky Anderson, the silver-haired skipper of the Cincinnati Reds, was expounding before Friday night's game on some of the reasons why the Dodgers are where they are in the National League West and why his Reds are where they are.

"One very big reason," he said, "is Reggie Smith. Don't forget, this time last year he wasn't even in a Los Angeles uniform."

Sparky no doubt could have gone one more night without seeing him in a Los Angeles uniform.

Billy Martin lashes back at Anderson

NEW YORK (AP)—Billy Martin, manager of the New York Yankees, angrily denounced manager Sparky Anderson of the Cincinnati Reds Friday after Anderson had suggested that the defending American League champions lacked class.

"It is hard to understand how a guy whose team is 12½ games out of first place has time to worry about the New York Yankees," snapped Martin. "At the rate his team is going, they will probably be out of it by the end of July."

"Sparky Anderson is a great manager but he has got to be up-tight right now, and while it is comforting to know that someone of his caliber is worrying about us, it is hardly realistic because the way his team is going, they are going to require every bit of attention and concentration he can muster up for the rest of the season."

Anderson had been quoted as saying that although the Reds were losing this season, they had maintained their class, unlike the Yankees, who have had similar problems on the field and additional ones off it.

Martin pointed out that two weeks ago Anderson had criticized the Reds following a 10-1 loss against St. Louis by saying, "The trouble is our guys are blaming everybody but themselves for the way they are playing."

"Now, that is a paradox if I've ever seen one," said the Yankee skipper.

The Dodgers battered the Reds for a season-high 17 hits—three of them by Smith—in pounding out a 10-3 victory over Cincinnati before 54,438 (53,055 paid) roaring Dodger Stadium fans.

The triumph, the Dodgers' third without a loss over the Reds, extended their staggering lead in the National League West to 13 games over second-place San Francisco and 13½ over Cincinnati.

The Dodgers led by only two runs after seven innings, but they landed the knockout punch in the eighth, batting around for the 10th time this season in rolling the Reds for a five-spot.

Afterward, there was little in way of shouting or celebrating. Smith explained: "There's still a long way to go. We all know that. I'm glad everyone approached the game as they did, a lot of laughing and joking, but no overconfidence."

No one was laughing in the clubhouse of the Reds, who now are five games below .500 and have dropped four successive games.

"I said in the spring that the Dodgers would be leading in June,"

PULFORD QUILTS KINGS

Bob Pulford, who directed the Kings to the Stanley Cup playoffs the last four seasons, quit as coach of the NHL club Friday night.

Pulford's resignation came one day after Jake Milford quit as the Kings' general manager.

Pulford's multi-year contract, estimated at $50,000 per season, had run out, but money was not his most important consideration. Pully, 41, had argued in vain with owner Jack Kent Cooke over the necessity of keeping draft choices instead of trading them away.

Pulford would like to become a coach-general manager and it's believed he's interested in positions with Buffalo, Chicago, Toronto or Detroit.

No replacement was announced for Pulford, who coached the Kings to a 178-150-68 record.

New raves for Angel pitching

By Tracy Ringolsby
Staff Writer

TORONTO—The Angel pitching staff is making believers.

Everywhere the team goes, a story pops up in a local paper about the horrible Angel pitching. It is always printed before the locals get a chance to see the Angel pitchers.

And everywhere the team has gone the past couple of weeks, the pitchers have left town getting rave reviews.

"I guess they figure they have to write something, but they don't look at the stats," said reliever Paul Hartzell.

The latest story and the latest accolades came Friday, a night on which Gary Ross and Paul Hartzell combined their pitching talents to give the Angels a 4-1 victory over the expansion Toronto Blue Jays.

Ross got the win, his second in a row, for his seven innings of six-hit pitching.

Hartzell got the save, his fourth, for two hitless innings of relief. The pitching staff and manager Norm Sherry got the satisfaction of seeing the team's earned-run average for the last 16 games fall to 2.16.

"The way our pitching is going right now, it is definitely good enough to win the division," said Sherry. "Pitching is the difference in the final standings, and we have the advantage."

During the past couple of weeks, the Angels have won 12 games, and with their latest victory they climbed over the .500 level at 22-21 for the first time since the opening week of the season.

"I haven't seen a team in the league with better pitching during the last two weeks, and I think that is how it is going to stay," said Hartzell, who has a 1.04 earned run average since returning to the bullpen May 1.

"I think about what those guys are saying when I'm in the bullpen and warming up and it gives me a little extra," he said.

"By the second time around the league this year, I want everyone to know there are more than two pitchers (Nolan Ryan and Frank Tanana) on this team."

The Bird got shot down in his 1977 pitching debut, and Yankee Thurman Munson hasn't quite made up with teammate Reggie Jackson.

Miscues caused Mark Fidrych to lose his opener in American League activity Friday night, but he staunchly defended the two teammates who made the crucial mistakes.

"I consider that not an error on Tito (Fuentes) because of the bounce it took," Fidrych said of an error charged to the second baseman in the sixth inning.

in Geneva earlier this month and said they had agreed on "a common framework" for negotiating a new SALT pact.

Carter spent three hours and 19 minutes under the Atlantic aboard the nuclear submarine, the USS Los Angeles. He said the ship operated in simulated conditions of war and conducted an emergency drill in which its nuclear reactor was "scrammed," or shut down without warning.

The President said the ship's officers and crew reacted superbly.

But five of the ship's crewmen didn't get a chance to display any reactions, saying that they were banished from the boat while Carter was aboard because they're too fat.

The five said they were assigned to temporary duty aboard another submarine, the Spadefish, and were kept below, out of sight, until Carter left Port Canaveral, they told reporters angrily.

Capt. Lawrence Burkhardt, a spokesman at the Canaveral submarine base, said the Los Angeles did not need its full crew for the Carter mission. So, he said, since "we wanted to present a good appearance," the crewmen judged most overweight were relieved for the day.

Carter, in turn, won praise for his ship-handling.

"With absolute certainty, I can say there is no finer ship in the world," Carter said. "It strengthened my own confidence in the superior capability of the people who manage our very crucial defense mechanism. I'm very proud of what I see. Its safety is superb."

The sub's officers and crew, he added, gave "a demonstration of leadership in its purest and most excellent form."

Carter noted particularly that in a simulated casualty drill, junior officers and crewmen took over the duties of their superiors without a flaw. The President declared: "I was very much impressed."

The commander-in-chief's onetime mentor and former Navy superior, Adm. Hyman G. Rickover, looked over Carter's shoulder as he handled the submarine. "He did a superb job," Rickover said of the President's performance at the helm.

As a young naval officer in the early 1950s, Carter had worked with Rickover on development of the nuclear submarine.

THE ADMIRAL said Carter operated the submarine's bow planes and stern planes to guide it through the water at high speed. And the President handled the throttle of the nuclear plant when the ship was at top speed.

Rickover wouldn't say how fast that was, declaring only that it was "in excess of 20 knots."

He smiled and added that his protégé's achievements demonstrate "that any sailor or officer in the Navy can become President."

The President and Mrs. Carter and the snow-haired admiral rode the submarine into a dive in 100 fathoms, or 600 feet, of water 37 miles off the Florida coast. The sub surfaced at 3:15 p.m. EDT. Carter donned a black cap and foul-weather gear and stood on the sail as it returned to port.

Side by side, at two half-moon wheels in an array of instruments, the President operated bow planes and the First Lady operated stern planes as the craft maneuvered below.

Rickover took a turn at the bow plane with Carter alongside. At another point, the President took a large stainless steel wheel and guided the boat with Rickover looking over his shoulder. At still another point, he raised the periscope and peered through it.

When the submarine reached a depth of 200 feet, it made a simulated attack on a U.S. destroyer steaming nearby.

The President and the First Lady ate lunch with the ship's crew and Rickover dispensed with pomp and ceremony aboard. "I didn't go aboard to be treated as a high official," Carter said.

Deukmejian's bill would have authorized the penalty of death for persons convicted of first degree murder if one or more of 12 specifically cited "special circumstances" existed when the crime was committed.

The special circumstances include killing of a person known to be a police officer, murder by torture, murder by hire, murder by use of an explosive and murder during a robbery, home burglary, kidnapping, rape or sexual abuse of a child.

THE MEASURE contains an urgency clause, and would become effective immediately if the Legislature votes to override the governor's veto.

Last year she called an open-line radio broadcast and told surprised listeners she wanted to be "more than a rose in my husband's lapel. I'm not going to be locked away again as I have been in the past and told I'm not allowed to do anything because I have no rights."

At a formal reception in Washington early this year, she was the only woman not wearing a long dress. When asked about it, she said she did not "give a damn" about the reaction.

RUMORS of a separation became widespread after Margaret went to Toronto on March 5 for a recording session and performance by the Rolling Stones rock group and spent the weekend in the same hotel as the British Stones.

It was not a happy sixth wedding anniversary for Trudeau, who had taken the young Margaret as his bride in a quiet ceremony in Vancouver on March 4, 1971.

Last March 8, Margaret and Mick Jagger, the Stones lead singer, flew to New York on separate planes. Both Mrs. Trudeau and Jagger denied any romantic involvement.

Margaret, who stayed with Princess Yasmin Khan, daughter of actress Rita Hayworth and Aly Khan, during her time in New York, said she could not understand "where anyone would get the idea" she was having a romance with the singer.

JAGGER told reporters he flew to New York to visit his wife and daughter and added, "Margaret Trudeau is a very attractive person, but we are not having an affair."

The Trudeaus were last seen together publicly on May 16 at a Parliament Hill ceremony announcing plans for the Canada Summer Games in Newfoundland.

At that time they accepted a Newfoundland puppy for their sons — Justin Pierre, 5, Alexandre (Sacha) Emmanuel, 3, and Michel Charles-Emile, who will be 2 in October.

The next day, Margaret flew to New York to attend a ballet and then went to Washington for the White House press photographers' dinner as a guest of People magazine.

A BRIEF announcement on the separation from the prime minister's office said:

"Pierre and Margaret Trudeau announce that because of Margaret's wishes they shall begin living separate and apart.

"Margaret relinquishes all privileges as the wife of the Prime Minister and wishes to leave the marriage and pursue an independent career.

"Pierre will have custody of their three sons, giving Margaret generous access to them.

"Pierre accepts Margaret's decision with regret and both pray that their separation will lead to a better relationship between themselves."

Trudeau was a bachelor prime minister when he slipped away for the surprise marriage to Margaret Sinclair, daughter of a former federal fisheries minister.

SHE REMAINED quietly in the background until the 1974 general election, when she campaigned with her husband.

"He taught me a lot about loving," she told a televised election rally in her hometown of North Vancouver, B.C. She later told friends she had hoped Trudeau would lose and quit politics so they could have more time together.

Huntington Beach site looked at for new power plant

Huntington Beach is a possible site for a 1,290-megawatt Southern California Edison Co. power plant that would burn fuel similar to jet fuel.

The utility announced Friday that the site of its existing plant in Huntington Beach is one of four being considered for the new plant, that would cost between $750 million and $1 billion.

The three other sites are the company's existing facility at Ormond Beach south of Oxnard in Ventura County, an undeveloped site in the Lucerne Valley in San Bernardino County, or another undeveloped site west of Rosamond in the Kern County portion of the Antelope Valley, according to Thomas Reed, project director.

The facility would include three units, each using five turbines. Exhaust from the turbines would flow into water and create enough steam to operate a sixth generator.

The utility intends to file a notice of intent to build the plant with the State Energy Commission next month. If the commission grants approval, the plant could be in operation as early as 1985, Reed said.

Cocaine 'worth millions' was lost by U.S. Customs

Knight News Service

MIAMI — Millions of dollars worth of cocaine got lost somewhere between government keepers and the courts, a blistering U.S. Customs internal audit has concluded.

Fifteen pounds of cocaine, valued at $3.5 million, was lost between Customs and U.S. District Court, auditors reported after they scrutinized 93 drug seizures made in 1975.

Another cocaine haul worth $2.9 million may have been destroyed, but nobody really knows what happened after the Miami Customs seizure clerk took custody of the drug.

OTHER LOSSES in a total $7-million worth of missing narcotics, auditors said, involved small quantities of cocaine and marijuana that could not be fully accounted for.

The audit report, which Customs officials last month refused to volunteer to Knight-Ridder Newspapers, was made available by a confidential source.

His department is blameless, snapped James E. Townsend, Miami's district director of Customs, Thursday. "I swear we have audits more often than I change my underwear."

"We've run investigation after investigation, but there hasn't been a case of personnel malfeasance since I became district director in 1967. If there had been, I'd have been the first to pack the rogue off to Lewisburg (Penitentiary)."

TOWNSEND explained that agents take many seizures for destruction at a time, and sometimes find one missing. "Well, they get back, find it in the seizure room, and throw it in the river or flush it down the toilet. Maybe they signed off as having thrown it into the incinerator. That technicality is the kind of thing we're talking about."

Townsend said he had no specific recollection of the big cocaine discrepancies, uncovered more than a year ago. "We've got so many cases going," he said.

"The inadequacy of controls over seized drugs was called to your attention in previous reports," auditors scolded Townsend. "In effecting the seizure of hard drugs, your employees have exercised considerable initiative, ingenuity, hard work and dedication. These efforts should not be jeopardized or nullified by a relaxation of these standards after the drugs have been seized."

Of the 93 seizures scrutinized in 1975, the audit showed, 17 cases showed inadequate documentation of custody or destruction. Customs' Internal Review investigators could find no personnel culpable in the discrepancies, so the losses were presumed due to bookkeeping errors.

Of the $3.5-million worth of cocaine lost between Customs and U.S. District Court, the audit says only "the court, customarily, does not issue a receipt for seizures turned over to it. Consequently, the district office of Customs did not have proper support for disposition of the drugs."

THE EXPLANATION for the $2.9-million worth of cocaine lost from headquarters is contained in the audit in two sentences: "Seizure clerk receipted for cocaine on March 18, 1975. There is no evidence of disposition of this seizure."

raphers, including the founding of a Boy Scout troop for the purpose of making sex films.

Lloyd told of a recent case in Texas in which a "recruiting officer" allegedly abducted an 11-year-old boy and took him to Mexico to star in a pornographic film. The alleged recruiter had been heard boasting that a Mexican porno producer paid $25,000 for each fairskinned Anglo child delivered.

One man who was not allowed to speak before the committee was Tim O'Hara of the Guyon Society, a group whose motto is "Sex Before 8 Or Then It's Too Late."

"This is body guilt legislation," O'Hara told a reporter. He said there is no such thing as pornography, that he prefers to refer to such films as "child sex films."

Most child pornography is currently prosecuted under obscenity statutes, but police say successful prosecution is difficult.

"You have to show that the film is obscene by taking it to a magistrate, who views the film and gives you a yea or nay," Lt. Don La Guardia of the Los Angeles Police Department's child sexual exploitation unit said.

"After the magistrate makes a decision, the attorney can appeal. Even then, you have to go back to the distributor and ask him, 'Did you know this material was obscene?' He says, 'Gee, I didn't know that,' and he gets it off his shelves for awhile."

A similar hearing on juvenile pornography was also conducted in Chicago, and the New York Legislature has taken up the bill on a state level.

In Chicago, Acting Mayor Michael Bilandic told a Senate subcommittee on juvenile delinquency that federal legislation outlawing child pornography is "essential and urgently needed."

Local law enforcement is hampered because much of the child pornography industry involves interstate traffic which "urgently requires the legislative attention only Congress can provide," Bilandic said Friday.

In Albany, N.Y., the State Assembly passed a bill Thursday which would make it a felony to use children under the age of 16 in a "sexual performance."

New raves for Angel pitching

By Tracy Ringolsby

TORONTO—The Angel pitching staff is making believers.

Everywhere the team goes, a story pops up in a local paper about the horrible Angel pitching. It is always printed before the locals get a chance to see the Angel pitchers.

And everywhere the team has gone the past couple of weeks, the pitchers have left town getting rave reviews.

"I guess they figure they have to write something, but they don't look at the stats," said reliever Paul Hartzell.

The latest story and the latest accolades came Friday, a night on which Gary Ross and Paul Hartzell combined their pitching talents to give the Angels a 4-1 victory over the expansion Toronto Blue Jays.

Ross got the win, his second in a row, for his seven innings of six-hit pitching.

Hartzell got the save, his fourth, for two hitless innings of relief. The pitching staff and manager Norm Sherry got the satisfaction of seeing the team's earned-run average for the last 16 games fall to 2.16.

"The way our pitching is going right now, it is definitely good enough to win the division," said Sherry. "Pitching is the difference in the final standings, and we have the advantage."

During the past couple of weeks, the Angels have won 12 games, and with their latest victory they climbed over the .500 level at 22-21 for the first time since the opening week of the season.

"I haven't seen a team in the league with better pitching during the last two weeks, and I think that is how it is going to stay," said Hartzell, who has a 1.04 earned run average since returning to the bullpen May 1.

"I think about what those guys are saying when I'm in the bullpen and warming up and it gives me a little extra," he said.

"By the second time around the league this year, I want everyone to know there are more than two pitchers (Nolan Ryan and Frank Tanana) on this team."

Sparky Anderson, the silver-haired skipper of the Cincinnati Reds, was expounding before Friday night's game on some of the reasons why the Dodgers are where they are in the National League West and why his Reds are where they are.

"One very big reason," he said, "is Reggie Smith. Don't forget, this time last year he wasn't even in a Los Angeles uniform."

Sparky no doubt could have gone one more night without seeing him in a Los Angeles uniform.

Billy Martin lashes back at Anderson

NEW YORK (AP)—Billy Martin, manager of the New York Yankees, angrily denounced manager Sparky Anderson of the Cincinnati Reds Friday after Anderson had suggested that the defending American League champions lacked class.

"It is hard to understand how a guy whose team is 12½ games out of first place has time to worry about the New York Yankees," snapped Martin. "At the rate his team is going, they will probably be out of it by the end of July."

"Sparky Anderson is a great manager but he has got to be up-tight right now, and while it is comforting to know that someone of his caliber is worrying about us, it is hardly realistic because the way his team is going, they are going to require every bit of attention and concentration he can muster up for the rest of the season."

Anderson had been quoted as saying that although the Reds were losing this season, they had maintained their class, unlike the Yankees, who have had similar problems on the field and additional ones off it.

Martin pointed out that two weeks ago Anderson had criticized the Reds following a 10-1 loss against St. Louis by saying, "The trouble is our guys are blaming everybody but themselves for the way they are playing."

"Now, that is a paradox if I've ever seen one," said the Yankee skipper.

The Dodgers battered the Reds for a season-high 17 hits—three of them by Smith—in pounding out a 10-3 victory over Cincinnati before 54,438 (53,055 paid) roaring Dodger Stadium fans.

The triumph, the Dodgers' third without a loss over the Reds, extended their staggering lead in the National League West to 13 games over second-place San Francisco and 13½ over Cincinnati.

The Dodgers led by only two runs after seven innings, but they landed the knockout punch in the eighth, batting around for the 10th time this season in rolling the Reds for a five-spot.

Afterward, there was little in way of shouting or celebrating. Smith explained: "There's still a long way to go. We all know that. I'm glad everyone approached the game as they did, a lot of laughing and joking, but no overconfidence."

No one was laughing in the clubhouse of the Reds, who now are five games below .500 and have dropped four successive games.

"I said in the spring that the Dodgers would be leading in June,"

PULFORD QUILTS KINGS

Bob Pulford, who directed the Kings to the Stanley Cup playoffs the last four seasons, quit as coach of the NHL club Friday night.

Pulford's resignation came one day after Jake Milford quit as the Kings' general manager.

Pulford's multi-year contract, estimated at $50,000 per season, had run out, but money was not his most important consideration. Pully, 41, had argued in vain with owner Jack Kent Cooke over the necessity of keeping draft choices instead of trading them away.

Pulford would like to become a coach-general manager and it's believed he's interested in positions with Buffalo, Chicago, Toronto or Detroit.

No replacement was announced for Pulford, who coached the Kings to a 178-150-68 record.

Poly High's 440 relay team accomplished what it set out to do at Friday night's CIF Southern Section State qualifying meet at Cerritos College.

The Jackrabbits didn't win—James Sanford saw to that—but the Hares did run a strong second in the one-lap relay to easily qualify for next weekend's state meet at UCLA.

Pasadena's Sanford, as he has done in so many prep meets this spring, turned in an overpowering performance before an estimated 7,000 fans.

His evening's timetable included:

- 7:05 p.m., anchoring his 440 relay team to a 41.8 victory, a race Pasadena had under control all the way due to a strong first leg by Ivan Cleveland;

- 8:25, cruising to a 47.5 clocking in the 440, only one tenth off his CIF record (second place was a distant 48.7);

- 8:45, coming back only 20 minutes after the quarter to capture the 220 in 21.1, equalling his season-best (teammate Cleveland was second in 21.6);

- 9:30, capping the evening's show with a 48.8 anchor leg in the mile relay that rallied his team to a come-from-behind 3:18.7 win over city rival Muir (3:19.3).

Poly almost overextended on its first handoff from Marvin Lard to Schevelle Ward, but the Hares were still in good shape to see who was going to be second to Pasadena when Joe Flowers passed off to anchorman Chris Neal.

Neal had more than enough to hold off challenges from Santa Ana Valley and Duarte as the Jackrabbits were timed in 42.5.

Coaches warned, too

Dawkins, Lucas hit with $2,500 fines

Associated Press

Darryl Dawkins of the Philadelphia 76ers and Maurice Lucas of the Portland Trail Blazers were fined $2,500 each by National Basketball Association commissioner Lawrence O'Brien Friday as a result of their fight during Thursday night's playoff game.

O'Brien notified the players of their fines by telegram and also warned coaches Gene Shue of the 76ers and Jack Ramsay of the Trail Blazers to avoid any similar incidents during the balance of the championship series.

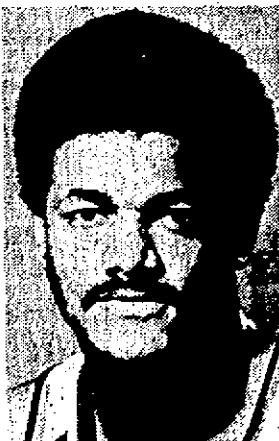

"Your conduct could have resulted in a serious injury to another player and it created the potential for a violent crowd reaction that might have led to a serious injury to innocent spectators," O'Brien told the players.

The NBA rules permit the commissioner to inflict a fine up to $10,000 as well as a suspension.

Dawkins and Lucas squared off in the final five minutes of the game after the 76er center had swung at Portland's Bob Gross. The punch connected with Dawkins' teammate, Doug Collins, who suffered a four-stitch cut over his eye.

"Playoffs are very emotional, but there's no excuse for that kind of behavior by spectators," said Shue.

The sight of Lucas and Dawkins squaring off at midcourt, fists held high, must have been a frightening image to the millions watching the game on national television.

But it did not deter the 100 or so spectators who decided they wanted a piece of the action.

"Some of those fans are nuts," said Portland's Corky Calhoun, who played his college ball in Philadelphia for Penn. "You could get killed out there."

One fan took a swing at a Portland player and had to be wrestled away by Philadelphia's rotund, middle-aged assistant coach, Jack McMahon.

Mario: 500 tops L.B. Grand Prix

By Bill Simmons
Knight News Service

INDIANAPOLIS—For 32 of the 33 people who will start Sunday's 61st Indianapolis 500-mile race, it will be the pinnacle of their careers.

Tom Soeva, who set a one-lap record of 200.535 mph and four-lap average of 198.884 in winning the pole position, says it's the greatest thrill of his 28 years.

If anyone doubts the importance that A.J. Foyt attaches to the Indy 500, consider that he won here three times in his first 10 years and is coming up on his 10th try for that record fourth victory.

For Mario Andretti, however, winning this race is but one of two goals he has set for himself in 1977.

"From a race standpoint, winning Indianapolis is as important as any championship you're after," said the 37-year-old resident of Nazareth, Pa., who is pursuing the World Formula One championship with a fervor one might think would be reserved for youth.

"No one will remember me as the winner of the 1977 Long Beach Grand Prix or the Spanish Grand Prix," Mario said. "But they will remember me if I win this race, just as they will remember if I win the World Championship."

From the sound of it, you'd think the man was still struggling up the ladder of success. The truth of the matter is he is trying to more firmly entrench his position at the top.

He first came to Indy in 1965, finished third and was unanimous choice as Rookie of the Year. He went on to win the national championship that year, the following year and again in 1969, the year he won this race.

In the interim, he proved his versatility by winning the Daytona 500 and the 12 Hours of Sebring international sports car race.

Since then, Andretti has enjoyed considerable success in the United States Auto Club's dirt-car championship series and the Sports Car Club of America's Formula 5,000 series.

Three years ago, he began his quest for the Formula One crown, an idea that traces its roots to his boyhood days in Trieste, Italy.

But this week, the Grand Prix courses of the world are about as far from his mind as possible. The only thing he is thinking about is the Indianapolis 500.

"A lot of people don't understand when in March I said I couldn't care less about the 500," Andretti said. "If you have an intensive program like I have, you have to concentrate on the current one and forget the rest. In the end, that's the only way to do the best job—one day at a time."

There are other things that are on Andretti's mind in the way of strategy. Foremost is the fact that, although this track has been here for 68 years, it will be pretty much of an unknown factor because it was recently repaved.

Shorter wins Indy's mini-marathon race

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)—The speeds were a lot slower but the determination for success was familiar Friday at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway as runners ranging in age from nine to over 50 competed in the first Indianapolis mini-marathon.

"I've run in events like this to help promote long-distance running," said 1972 Olympic gold medal winner Frank Shorter, who led the field of more than 800 participants.

He was timed at 1:03:56 over the 13-mile course.

The runners made one trip around the 2½-mile oval track where drivers' speeds are expected to top 180 mph.

Ball State graduate Bill Gavaghan of Indianapolis finished second.

French courts prove graveyard for Yanks

PARIS (AP)—The red clay tennis courts of Roland Garros Stadium, graveyard of American hopes over the years, are taking their toll again.

Stock car sets altitude record at Charlotte

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP)—Bruce Jacob's stock car went sailing end over end through the air and crashed in flames during final qualifying Friday for Sunday's World 600 race. Jacob escaped with minor injuries.

His Chevrolet collided with Rick Newsom's Ford coming out of the fourth turn on the 1.5-mile Charlotte Motor Speedway as both drivers attempted to qualify for the Sunday race.

Newsom, of Fort Mill, S.C., hit the outside guard rail, spun and hit the rail again, according to track officials. As his car came off the wall, Jacob hit it from behind. The crash flipped Jacob's vehicle several times and the car burst into flames.

Jacob was taken to Cabarrus Memorial Hospital in Concord and was released after being treated for cuts, abrasions and soreness.

Newsom was treated at the same hospital for what was diagnosed as the track's a cracked bone in his foot but which turned out later to be a broken leg.

The accident, which demolished both cars, eliminated both drivers from qualifying.

"When I came off the third turn I guess Rick Newsom blew in front of me," Jacob said. "Before I could do anything, I hit the oil from his car, then slammed into the rear end of his car and my car took off. It seemed like it went straight up."

"The car started doing a slow roll in the air and when it hit the ground, it started flipping. I just tried to hold on. I don't know how many times it flipped," the Indianapolis, Ind., driver said.

The crash split the front frame and engine support on Newsom's car, and sent the engine spinning onto the track, officials said.

Few spectators or reporters were on hand when the incident occurred Friday morning, but drivers who had already qualified watched the wreck.

Two rounds of the men's singles have been completed in the French Open Tennis Championships and only four of the 27 Americans who started out are still in contention.

But Stan Smith, one of the U.S. survivors, sees a brighter future for his country on these slow surfaces where no American has won the men's title for 22 years.

"You are going to see a lot of American winners in these championships in the next decade," Smith said. "Things are changing. We have a lot of good clay-court players coming along in the United States."

"It is true that many Americans who have learned their tennis on faster surfaces come to Paris and don't know how to play these slow courts."

SINCE Tony Trabert won the French title in 1954 and 1955, Americans have been shut out. Australians and Europeans have dominated on these dusty red lay-outs, where rallies can seem interminable and patience and endurance count for more than big serves.

"We have two prospective champions already," Smith said. "These courts are just made for Eddie Dibbs and Harold Solomon."

But Dibbs' hopes are over for this year, destroyed by Rolf Norberg of Sweden in the second round. Solomon is still going.

Friday Smith used grass court tactics, attacking consistently at the net and volleying, to defeat Juergen Fassbender of West Germany 6-4, 6-3, 7-5.

Nine vie for $92,600 Los Alamitos title

Bulldogger heads Derby field

Wendy Wilsey's 3-year-old colt, The Bulldogger, encounters nine other top sophomores in the 24th renewal of the $92,600 Los Alamitos Derby tonight.

The Bulldogger will meet Truly Terrific, Sir Rambler, Azure Three, Suwanee Jude, Kinda Sudden, Think Money, Tuxedo Junction, He's A Pleasure and Oh Missy.

First post is 7:45 p.m.

The Bulldogger was the fastest of 34 qualifiers to the event, completing 440 yards in 21.90. That win followed his impressive score in the $250,000 Golden State Derby at Bay Meadows which added $106,000 to his career earnings. He is a full brother to I'm Kipity, the former Los Alamitos 300-yard track-record holder.

His owner, 27-year-old Wendy Wilsey of Bakersfield, purchased the son of Kipitydoo from breeder Cecil Stanger for $27,000 after the colt was withdrawn from the All-American yearling sale when he failed to bring more than $18,500.

His trainer, 23-year-old Bruce Jackson, obtained his license in February, and The Bulldogger's score in the Bay Meadows Derby was his first as a trainer. Kenneth Hart, leading the national riding standings, will be in the irons.

The second fastest qualifier to the Derby was Truly Terrific, a gelded son of Truly Truckle. He handily won the trials in 21.97 despite poor start. The win was the 11th of 22 starts and he was been unplaced only once.

Highly regarded 2-year-old De Moon and longshot Easy Della Jet gave jockey Ken Hart and trainer Dennis Mittelstaedt a sweep of both divisions of Friday's Leo Stakes.

De Moon made it six wins in six starts by capturing the second division and paid $4.20 after Easy Della Jet won the first portion and returned $26.

It was a night of big payoffs as Hoist Boom and Top Mear combined for the second largest $2 exacta payoff in Los Alamitos history ($1,012.80).

Then in the second race, Tumblin Tumblewood paid $100.80 for the biggest payoff of the meeting as a 49-1 longshot.

Hardin takes 1-shot lead in Snead

Jack Hardin, the man who designed the club-head attached to the utility tool used by Alan Shepard on the 1969 trip to the moon, carded a two-under-par 69 Friday to take the first-round lead in the $100,000 Sam Snead Open golf tournament in Anaheim.

Hardin, 63, of Carlsbad, held a one-stroke lead in this event for golfers 50 and older. Eighty-one seniors are competing.

Snead, who turned 65 Friday, and Tommy Bolt were one shot back at 70 in the 54-hole tournament which winds up Sunday.

Ray Montgomery and Marty Furgol shot even-par 71s over the 6,397-yard Yorba Linda Country Club course.

The oldest player in the field, 74-year-old Joe Mozell of West Los Angeles, carded an 82.

Bolt was among the top draws of the approximately 5,000 spectators.

"I'm not playing well at all," he commented after his round. "I scored well on know-how. I had some good putting, but I didn't play very well because I three-putted three times."

Bolt missed an eagle on the 18th green by inches. "How long was the putt?" Bolt, who nearly won the PGA title in 1971, was asked. "Bout a mile and a half," he laughed.

His off-color language often upset governing golf bodies. But Friday, Bolt was up to his same old verbal tricks.

"I used a little foul language on the course today," he acknowledged. "The people seemed to like it. If the Pope played golf, he'd use some of it, too."

Bolt was then asked if his anger, vented verbally, upset his game.

"Ask all the caddies out there," he responded. "I'm a soft touch. I'm the one carrying the stick."

The winner of the tournament, sponsored by Champion Sparkplugs, earns $15,000 in cash, a $7,000 automobile and a $3,000 scholarship for a youngster of his choice.

Weather plagues Atlanta tournament

Stockton, uh, scrambles to tie

By Bob Green
Associated Press

ATLANTA—Dave Stockton, who won two PGA national championships with some matchless scrambling, resorted to his trouble-making specialty for a three-under-par 69 that staked him to a tie for the second-round lead Friday in the weather-plagued, $200,000 Atlanta Classic golf tournament.

"I can already read what you're going to say about me scrambling," Stockton grinned after posting a 137 total, seven under par for two rounds over the hilly, leg-straining Atlanta Country Club course.

He shared the top spot with former U.S. Open champion Lou Graham and Mac McLendon.

"I'm hitting my irons good and I'm putting as good as I can possibly putt," Stockton said.

"But I'm frustrated by my driver. I have absolutely no idea what's going to come off it—left, right, what."

"I visited the whole golf course—all of it."

Almost constantly he was faced with potential disaster. He once one-putted for double bogey. He was saved from going out of bounds when another shot hit a tree and bounced back into play.

He shanked one shot out of bounds, but noted "it was a good, solid shank. Went a pretty good ways. Almost into somebody's house."

He hit one approach shot through the top of a tree, causing a miniature shower from the wet leaves—and then birdied the hole.

His putting saved him. He one-putted nine of the first 11 greens he played and required only 24 strokes—12 below the norm—on the greens that were dampened by a heavy afternoon shower.

"The way I'm putting, I know I'm going to stay in the thick of things," Stockton said.

GRAHAM, LIKE Stockton, had to finish first-round play in the early-morning dew before going to their second 18 holes. They were among the 57 players

Graham recorded a birdie-birdie finish to that first round for the lead at 66, but could do no better than a 71 over the next 18.

McLendon got his share of the second-round lead with a pair of beautiful wedge shots, each from about 100 yards, that stopped less than three feet from the flag for birdies on his 16th and 17th holes. He shot a 69.

Power-hitting Jim Dent was one shot away from the lead at 138 after a 70. Bob Dickson birdied six of his first seven holes on the way to a 65, the best round of the tournament, that put him alone at 139, only two shots back halfway through this chase for a $40,000 first prize.

Jack Nicklaus, who scored his third victory of the season early this week, struggled to a 73-143. He made double bogey six on the 14th hole and bogey six after hitting one in the water on the 18th.

The round was interrupted briefly by a heavy afternoon shower. Play was not called but many players took shelter under trees and umbrellas.

Stockton birdied the first hole from 20 feet, then had to one-putt for par from 12 feet on the third and bogeyed the fourth from a bunker.

He birdied the sixth with a six-iron shot to 30 inches, holed a 25-footer for birdie on the next hole, wedged to 12 feet and dropped the putt for a third consecutive birdie on the eighth.

His driver got him in trouble on the ninth, but he hit a sand wedge through the top of a tree, watched the ball trickle onto the green, then holed a 30-foot putt for his fourth birdie in a row.

L.B. tee chase resumes today

Not in the last five years has a golfer over the age of 22 won the Long Beach City Match Play Championship.

Four golfers 22 or under and four ranging from 23 to 55 will decide the 53rd championship beginning today at Skylinks and ending Sunday with a 36-hole final.

The slight favorite is 25-year-old Greg Hetzer, who won the medal at 1-over par and then played 1-under for 45 holes last weekend, winning three matches as the field was pared from 64 to eight.

Hetzer plays 23-year-old Curt Ambrose of Huntington Beach, and 20-year-old Tony Valadez of San Diego takes on 55-year-old Long Beach fireman John McMonegal in the upper bracket matches this morning.

Rick Meyer, 20, of Cerritos College plays 27-year-old Long Beach attorney Vern Brickey, and 22-year-old Phil Caputo of Long Beach takes on 21-year-old Ben Serns of Harbor City in the lower bracket.

MORNING MATCHES start at 8:36, the afternoon semifinals at 1:06. Here's how the quarterfinalists advanced:

Relaxed Porter fires 63 after fishing trip

CAMP HILL, Pa. (AP)—A relaxed Mary Bea Porter shot a career-best seven under par 63 Friday to take a one-shot lead in the $50,000 Lady Keystone Open at Armitage Golf Club.

The Phoenix golfer stormed through the front nine with four consecutive birdies, added three more on the back side and didn't have a bogey on the flawless round.

Porter had taken her first break from golf in months on Thursday, when she went up to the mountains northwest of here for a day of rest and relaxation.

She said she did a little trout fishing and shot skeet, but she didn't touch a golf club.

"I guess I just needed a little break and the little fishing trip is what did it," she said.

She held a one-shot lead over Carole Jo Skala, who said she was so nervous Friday after a four-week layoff that she was a "basket case."

Oosterhuis holds lead

SANDWICH, England (AP)—Britain's Peter Oosterhuis held a one-stroke lead in the PGA Golf Championship over the windy Royal St. George's links Friday, but South Africa's Andries Oosterhuizen, who had shared the lead with him in the morning, had fallen far behind.

Oosterhuis' followed Wednesday's one-under-par 69 and Thursday's one-over-par 71 with a 75 for a total of 215. Oosterhuizen followed his 69 and 71 figures with a disastrous 81 for 221.

On Oosterhuis' heels was Doug McClelland, who shot a third-round 70 for 216. McClelland and

Fresh, freckled Texan Sissy recalls Hepburn star quality

By Bob Thomas

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Sissy Spacek is fascinating to watch, both on the screen and off.

She has proved her stardom in two successive films: "Carrie," a Gothic tale that became one of the surprise hits of 1976, and the current "Three Women," Robert Altman's murky symbolic, disturbing report on female relationships.

Sissy Spacek displays in person some of the same qualities that have made her such a startling screen presence. She is prettier off screen, with a fresh, freckled glow about her. Every few minutes she whips the strands of her straw-colored hair away from her face. She is a nonstop talker in the manner of Kate Hepburn, more earthy perhaps, with a Texas drawl instead of a Connecticut twang.

SISSY SPACEK
"Creative person" experience in Canada was like a spiritual awakening; I had moments of seeing abstractly things that used to be specific. I came back fresh and awakened."

AN INTERVIEWER gets the impression that Sissy Spacek will get what she's after. That's pretty much the story of her 27 years thus far, though some lulls have interrupted her ascent to stardom. Like the one after "Badlands."

She had left Quitman, Tex., for a performing career in New York, where she lost some of her accent and gained experience in coffee houses and off-Broadway plays. Her film debut came with "Prime Cut." Then "Badlands" seemed to be the star-making role.

"It was a beautiful picture, and the ad campaign was great; I knew it would be a hit," Sissy recalled. Indeed "Badlands" was a hit with thoughtful critics, but few others came to see it.

For two years afterward she didn't work as an actress. Instead, she performed the duties of set decorator for such films as "Weekend of Terror" and "Phantom of the Paradise," on which her husband, Jack Fisk, was art director.

"I PICKED UP furniture, fabrics, colors — everything that went into the appearance of sets; it was just like decorating a house," she said. "I loved doing it, and I learned a lot I didn't know about the movie business."

The lull ended with "Katherine," a television movie about an upper-class girl who becomes a revolutionary. The parallel to Patty Hearst was evident, but Sissy's performance made something more of the film. Next came "Welcome to L.A." and "Carrie."

"I don't wait to be cast in roles; I read scripts and books to find parts that I can do," she explained. "I learned about 'Carrie' when Jack was hired as art director. Brian (DePalma, the director) had somebody else in mind for the role, but I went after it. Several of us read (auditioned) for Brian in groups of threes, then switched roles."

She tested, won the role and later an Academy Award nomination.

"Three Women" could provide another. Robert Altman, who had produced "Welcome to L.A.," said the script came to him in a dream, fully cast with Shelley Duvall and Miss Spacek. "Three Women" does have a dream-like quality that fascinates many viewers and turns off others.

SPACE MOUNTAIN

ANAHEIM (AP) — Just like the real thing, two astronauts said Friday after the maiden voyage of a new Disneyland ride designed to bring sensations of space flight to earthbound tourists. "Space Mountain," a dizzying $20 million high-speed rollercoaster ride through swirling three-dimensional visual effects that include a shower of meteors, brought plaudits from Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, the first man in space, and Capt. Walter Schirra.

"It was very spectacular," said Glenn. "I'm impressed very favorably with the way it duplicates the forces of launch and the vibrations and noises of space flight." Schirra, of the Mercury, Gemini and Apollo projects said, "It's great fun and its visual effects are gorgeous."

Space Mountain is the 56th attraction at Disneyland.

LIKE HEPBURN, Sissy is certain of her talent and her direction:

"I don't want my career to be separated from my life. . . I like to keep a close rein on things and not let the tail wag the dog. . . I like to think of myself as a creative person. . . I don't want to be in the position of being forced to do a film. . . Some day I would like to make a film of my own."

She spoke excitedly of a recent hiking trip in Canada with a woman friend:

"It was fantastic. I slept out in the wilds and went on a 12-day fast to purify my system. We hiked as hard as we could, pushing ourselves higher until our lungs would almost burst. We watched the birds and pressed flowers and a kept a log, like our own 'Kon-Tiki.'"

"I would like to continue to explore, to seek new horizons. The

HOLLYWOOD — Should you survive Memorial Day with enough strength to turn on the tube, turn it on at 9 p.m. Monday for TV's fifth crack at "Our Town" by the late Thornton Wilder. It's on NBC.

The 1938 play, a Pulitzer Prize-winner, is a deceptively simple look at plain people in quieter times, the inhabitants of Grover's Corner, N.H., from May 1901 to the summer of 1913.

Hal Holbrook stars — and brilliantly — as the folksy stage manager, participant in and commentator on various scenes of the three-act play about daily life, love and marriage, and death, in small town America.

Nardino gets post at Paramount

Gary Nardino has been named president of Paramount Television Productions, the network sales and production unit of Paramount

If you've not seen Wilder's play in high school, college or affectionately mangled at the neighborhood little theater, a few words of warning are in order.

"OUR TOWN" uses no scenery and few props. It has no suspense, no deep psychological studies of its characters. It's so sweet in nature the government may someday ban it along with satcharin.

And the thing dawdles so much in the first act, about the daily, ordinary lives of those in Wilder's ordinary hamlet, first-time viewers may go seek something brisker, like watching paint dry.

Nor is "Our Town" given to sharp social comment. Case in point: The town's newspaper editor, Mr. Webb, played by Ronnie Cox, late of CBS' bucolic "Apple's Way."

When asked in an early scene why the citizenry doesn't do something about social injustice, he replies:

"I don't know. I guess we're huntin' like everybody else for a way the diligent and sensible can rise to the top and the lazy and quarrelsome can sink to the bottom, but it ain't easy 't find."

"MEANWHILE, we do all we can to help those who can't help themselves, and those who can we leave alone."

It seems a dated celebration of complacency, of small-town trivia.

But stay with the show because it'll grow on you if you're willing to mentally shift from TV's customary slam-bang, crisis-a-minute pace. It's like suddenly walking along a country road after high-speed hours of motoring on an endless highway. You notice more, enjoy more. And in this show you'll also enjoy a first-rate troupe that includes Ned Beatty and Sada Thompson as the town doctor and his wife, and Robby Benson as their son, George.

OTHER standouts: Cox and Barbara Bel Geddes as editor Webb and his wife, and Glynnis O'Connor, particularly good as their daughter Emily, the teen-ager who marries the Cox boy, later dies giving birth.

Summation: "Our Town," with excellent, unobtrusive direction by George Schafer, is an

Marina-hotel draws cheers, gripes at forum

By James M. Leavy
Staff Writer

Responding to official plans for the Long Beach shoreline, the public this week proposed adding a water ski competition area, opposed locating a Sohio supertanker terminal here and had mixed views on construction of a marina and a hotel.

The remarks came during a meeting Thursday of the Project Area Committee for the Downtown Redevelopment District.

Chairman Dwight Bennett called on a dozen speakers after Planning Director Robert Paternoster, Community Development Director James Hankla and Randall J. Verne, executive assistant to the city manager, discussed the downtown shoreline.

After reviewing the entire downtown redevelopment proposal, Paternoster focused on the key elements of the shoreline including a 1,600-slip marina, a 542-room hotel west of the Convention Center, a 50-acre aquatic park and a boardwalk extending from an area between Pine and Locust Avenues down to the water's edge.

Verne described completion of financial arrangements for the hotel as "imminent." He said it is possible a "lease package could be presented to the city council by late July."

A study on the marina and an environmental impact report are due next week, Verne said. He indicated it would take six months to get approval for the project by the Regional Coastal Commission but that construction of the marina could begin early in 1978.

He told committee member Jack Jay Jacobs that financing for the entire shoreline plan would come from four sources: tideland funds for the aquatic park and boardwalk; revenue bonds for the marina, which is expected to be self supporting; private capital for the hotel and other commercial developments; and federal grant funds for portions of the shoreline park.

Lawrence Ruff, representing Beach Area Concerned Citizens, expressed doubts about the location of the hotel. He said it should be north of Ocean Boulevard in order to draw convention visitors to the downtown commercial district.

He also questioned the proposal

Lawrence Ruff said the hotel should be north of Ocean Boulevard to draw convention visitors to the commercial district. . . . Gerald Arnett suggested a course for water ski tournaments. . . . Mrs. Faure Rilliet said, "We're going to have to change the name of the town to Short Beach or No Beach" . . . The reaction of the more than 100 persons in the audience gave no clear indication of a consensus. . . .

to pave over Rainbow Lagoon and convert it to a parking lot. He suggested a lagoon-water flow problem be solved by building a new pumping system.

Gerald Arnett, a member of the Long Beach Area Coalition of Water Skiers, suggested a course for water ski practice and tournaments be built instead of the aquatic park. He said it could be done for one-fifth the $12 million estimated cost of the park designed by Sasaki-Walker Associates.

Mrs. Faure Rilliet, who identified herself as a member of the Polar Bear Club, said she swims in the ocean every day and objected to the location of the marina, asserting that the city needs an extensive beach in the downtown area.

"We're called Long Beach, but the beach is getting shorter and shorter. We're going to have to change the name of the town to Short Beach or No Beach," she said.

She said boatowners will jump out of their cars and go to Catalina on the weekend. "I don't think people will run up Pine Avenue to spend money," she added.

Jacobs pointed out that the beach was being washed away until construction by the city stopped the erosion.

Donald Utter, speaking for the Alamitos Beach Preservation Group, said consideration of the proposed Sohio terminal should be included in downtown planning.

He termed it the "biggest single hazard" to downtown development and a "continuous source of pollution." He said downtown Long Beach is "right in the wind path" of the tanks and tankers which will be part of the facility.

"It will be the biggest architectural feature as you look seaward from downtown," he added.

Mrs. Minta Springer asked about the financing of the marina and said it is important the people of Long Beach be made aware that "they can fight it if they wish" by getting signatures on a petition for a referendum. That would force the city to take the bond issue to the public for approval. She did not, however, indicate opposition to the marina plan.

Frank Springer suggested city officials study Fisherman's Wharf in San Francisco and Mission Bay Park in San Diego before Long Beach embarks on similar ventures to attract visitors.

There were comments for and against the proposal for recreational vehicle parking areas at the shoreline. And there were questions about the availability of a park for the elderly in the downtown area. . . .

The reaction of the more than 100 persons in the audience to the ideas proposed and the criticisms gave no clear indication of a consensus on the development of the shoreline.

Paternoster pointed out that city officials were open to suggestions for the plan.

Hankla said the proposals would become part of the Coastal Program to be certified by the State Coastal Commission. He said they also would become part of the Long Beach general plan for land use.

The next meeting of the downtown Project Area Committee will be June 23.

Freeways jammed Memorial Day 'exodus' begins

By Mark Gladstone
Staff Writer

Southern Californians, who began jamming freeways early Friday afternoon in anticipation of the three-day Memorial Day weekend, can look forward to a wide range of activities under sunny skies.

Holiday traffic backed up on the freeways Friday as thousands of Southern Californians headed for the deserts, mountains and beaches.

"There's a mass exodus going out the Riverside Freeway" to the desert and Las Vegas, said Highway Patrol officer Tony Carolo.

The CHP was bringing in extra personnel to handle the heavy traffic. Freeways near the Los Angeles International Airport were particularly clogged Friday night.

The National Weather Service is predicting a warming trend for the weekend with highs along the coast near 70 after some morning low clouds, in the 60s in the mountains and in the 90s in the deserts.

Coast Guard Lt. Dirk Young in Long Beach said the holiday marks the start "of the real boating season."

He said an 82-foot-long Coast Guard cutter will be assigned to Catalina this weekend for the "peak search and rescue periods."

If the fair weather prediction holds, lifeguards are expecting large crowds at the beaches. In Long Beach, lifeguard stations will be fully staffed.

Banks and most government offices will be closed Monday.

The Automobile Club of Southern California has reported that all state beaches and major state and national parks are booked up for the weekend. The club also said gasoline prices will be 11.1 per cent higher than during 1976.

The CHP issued a warning to motorists to take a break from driving every hour and to refrain from drinking.

Several Long Beach area cemeteries will be holding Memorial Day observances Monday.

At Forest Lawn Memorial Park, 4471 Lincoln Ave., Cypress, there will be traditional services at 11 a.m. Monday.

At Rose Hills Memorial Park at 3900 Workman Mill Rd., Whittier, four separate services are planned Monday. The largest will be the annual Community Observance beginning at 11 a.m.

At Angeles Abbey Memorial Park, 1515 E. Compton Blvd., Compton, services sponsored by the United Veterans Council will be held at 11 a.m. Monday.

—30th annual Memorial Day Inboard Speedboat Regatta racing from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday at Marine Stadium, 5255 Appian Way, Long Beach.

—19th annual Strawberry Festival at Euclid Park, Garden Grove, from 11 a.m. today through Monday.

Catalina ruling due

The State Public Utilities Commission has under consideration a request of operators of the 500-passenger MV Avalon to provide cross-channel service between San Pedro and Avalon on Catalina Island.

Attorney James Lyons representing Catalina Holiday Cruises, Inc., said it was expected the PUC would act on a franchise-transfer application within 30 days. He said his clients were seeking approval to purchase the franchise held by the now-defunct Catalina Motor Cruises, Inc.

Lyons said the MV Avalon owners had agreed to purchase the franchise from Robert Filson, president of Catalina Motor Cruises, for $8,000.

The sale needs PUC sanction. Seeking the franchise transfer are Robert Sprague of Long Beach and Mitch Howe of Pasadena.

Opposing the franchise sale are representatives of Harbor Carriers, Inc., which operates three 700-passenger boats to the island from terminals in Long Beach and San Pedro.

Lyons said that an earlier plan to send the MV Avalon north to Puget Sound to operate between the U.S. mainland and Victoria on Vancouver Island in Canada has been abandoned.

Blind L.B. graduate eyes bright future

By Walt Murray
Staff Writer

Of the 5,500 students graduating this week from Long Beach State University, Ralph Black probably received more recognition than any.

He earned a perfect grade point average. He traveled to the White House

Ralph Black (facing camera): much-honored graduate last week to receive a scholarship from "Chip" Carter, the President's son.

He was voted the outstanding student in the School of Letters and the math department.

He was chosen a member of Phi Beta Kappa and Phi Kappa Phi, the honorary student societies. He has been admitted to Loyola Law School.

If that sounds impressive, consider that Black had a slight handicap to overcome.

He is blind. Black, handicapped student's commissioner at the college, was one of 600 students receiving degrees Friday in graduation exercises for the humanities division of the School of Letters.

About 4,500 undergraduates and 1,000 graduates got diplomas in nine campus ceremonies this week.

Overcoming handicaps is nothing new for Black. He graduated from San Bernardino High School with near-perfect grades with the help of Braille, tape recordings and helpful teachers.

Black plans to start Loyola this fall. He wants to remain involved with handicapped student causes. "I'd like to help statewide groups for the disabled in my spare time and perhaps get involved in government," he said.

Science-fiction writer Ray Bradbury, who has stirred the imaginations of millions with books such as "Fahrenheit 451" and "The Martian Chronicles," was speaker at the humanities commencement held in the college's central quad.

Bradbury's topic was "How to Be Creatively Mad Without Going Insane, or, How to Be the Hunchback of Notre Dame Without Letting It Show Too Much."

Bradbury, who has three movie credits and more than 400 pieces of work published, said he had never been to college.

"I entered the Los Angeles Public Library at age 14 and graduated when I was 28," he said.

He urged graduates to choose what they love in picking their life's work.

"If you find your love, you never have to work in your life," he said.

"If you don't listen to me, you'll have to pay $50 an hour to some psychiatrist 30 years from now who will tell you the same thing."

Bradbury said he stuck with his love, science fiction, through a time when people thought he was nuts — during the years before space travel.

He had nothing but optimism for America's future.

"We will survive by our imagination and our will," he said.

"We will rebuild small towns. We will airlift one million people out of New York City."

"By the time you're old, there will be colonies on the moon and on Mars, and we'll be on our way to Alpha Centauri," he said.

"This is the seed-bed planet, and we are the seed-bed people."

Active Seal Beach architect creates 'passive' system

Cheap solar-heating for home develops

By Bob Sanders
Staff Writer

A Seal Beach architect has an idea about how to let the sun heat your home at less expense than conventional heating or even conventional solar systems.

However, the idea is still on the drawing boards and hasn't been built yet.

"It's so simple," says the architect, Neil Pinney, "that I don't want too many people to see the drawing of it because I don't want somebody else putting it together before I do."

The system, which Pinney says can easily be put into new construction and, with slight alterations, in already-built buildings, is what engineers call a "passive" system.

That means it has no moving parts like pumps, motors, fans or plumbing.

"The key component," Pinney says, "is a transparent solar collector cover and a simple, self-closing vent system."

What he means by "solar collector cover" is that the wall is painted a dark color — black is perfect but dark brown or bronze will do nicely — and a clear plastic sheet is placed over it, leaving a thin, one-to-two-inch air space between.

What he means by "self-closing vent system" is a simple vent at the bottom to allow the air from the room to enter the space between the wall and the sheeting with a more complicated vent at the top that allows the heated air to rise and flow out into the room.

The top vent is complicated because it also has a vent to the outside that can be adjusted to force the hot air outside if the room gets too warm.

It is "self-closing" because, Pinney says, the outer vent cover is bigger and heavier than the inner one, so that it will pull the inner vent closed if there isn't enough warm air passing through the system.

"In addition to its simplicity," he says, "it has the additional function of helping to cool during the summer months by general interior cross ventilation."

Pinney claims that the system will be capable of providing 60 per cent of the heat necessary to warm the average 1,000-to-1,200-square-foot house.

The cost of a 4-by-8-foot panel will run about $100, Pinney says, and would be capable of providing one-third to one-half of the heat necessary to warm a small room.

The number of panels needed for a particular house would depend on its location and position in regard to the sun.

Pinney, a 47-year-old bachelor of 1637 Seal Way, first became interested in solar energy architecture in 1972 while working at the Urban Systems Lab at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

"I decided to work on passive — as opposed to active — solar systems," he says, "because the active systems are complicated, expensive and not too reliable."

He wrote a paper on "Energy Envelope/ (passive) Systems" for the International Energy Solar Society convention held at the UCLA in June 1975.

Although the Pinney system has not actually been built yet, he is working toward installations of it on trailers in the Seal Beach Trailer Park for developer Bill Dawson.

Probe of L.A. harbor funds asked

From Our State Bureau
SACRAMENTO—The State Lands Commission has asked the attorney general to investigate a Los Angeles Harbor Department report Assemblyman Vincent Thomas says was improperly withheld from the public.

The report, over the signature of John P. Grazer, director of port administration for the Harbor Department, and approved by Fred B. Crawford, general manager, appears, to support Thomas's contention that the City of Los Angeles has for decades been making invalid claims on Harbor Department revenues.

But Jan. 14, the date the report was to be submitted to the Harbor Commission, it was withheld by Crawford, Thomas said, and has yet to be made public.

The San Pedro Democrat turned a copy of the report over to the Lands Commission Thursday, and the commission then asked the attorney general's office to make an inquiry.

Thomas has been contending that the city has been appropriating tidelands trust revenues for general fund purposes, in direct violation of the state's agreement with the city which restricts the use of tidelands funds to the improvement of commerce, navigation, and fisheries.

The city has defended its use of harbor monies by saying it was making charges for various services provided, including the servicing of various harbor bond obligations.

Grazer's report states that "there is substantial and compelling historical evidence that it was the intent of the city not to be reimbursed for monies spent to redeem bonds sold between 1908 and 1924, and 'There does not seem to be any direct evidence that it was the intent of the city to be reimbursed for monies spent' to redeem bonds issued between 1921 and 1924, and only adoption of a city charter provision in 1924 'is considered sufficient expression of intent' by the city to seek reimbursement for monies expended between 1924 and 1930.

Thomas also is charging that the city, instead of maintaining separate accounts for funds clearly tidelands trust funds and other funds associated with harbor activities, commingled the funds into a single account. This makes accurate audit of the extent of the city's obligation to the tidelands trust virtually impossible, he said.

He has asked that the lands commission and the attorney general declare the city to be in violation of its trust agreement with the state, and rescind the city's stewardship over the harbor.

William F. Northrop,

the lands commission's executive officer, told the commission Thursday that a resolution of the dispute was near. He said the settlement would be submitted to the commission at its June meeting.

Tempers flare at Del Webb over Sinatra representation

PHOENIX (AP)—Tempers flared Friday during the annual meeting of stockholders of the Del Webb Corp. over the election of a slate of board of directors.

The dispute involved one seat on the nine-member board which is sought by Milton Rudin, who represents entertainer Frank Sinatra and eight per cent of the company's stock.

Sinatra and Rudin, of Beverly Hills, have been buying shares of Webb stock since August 1975. Sinatra now owns 520,000 common shares and Rudin 140,000 of the 8.3 million shares outstanding.

Supporting the Sinatra-Rudin group was Herman Greenspun, publisher of the Las Vegas Sun newspaper, who owns 415,000 shares.

Rudin charged the members with "taking a cheap shot" at Sinatra and himself in a full-page newspaper advertisement.

The advertisement noted that in 1963 the Nevada Gaming Commission terminated Sinatra's Nevada gaming license. The revocation resulted from a complaint by the State Gaming Control Board against Sinatra to which he failed to file any notice of defense.

Rudin told stockholders he had almost as much money invested in Webb stock as the entire board of directors, and that Sinatra had five times as much at stake.

"All we want is to be represented on the board," he said. "This is a public corporation, not a damn country club."

Rudin characterized recent newspaper accounts of alleged connections between the late Del Webb and the underworld as "a lot of crap."

"The crap that came out of Arizona about Webb's Mafia connections is just that—crap," he said. "Nothing could be further from the truth."

During a heated discussion concerning the payment of stock dividends, Greenspun called board chairman Robert Johnson a liar.

"I've lost more money in Del Webb stock than the entire board of directors have invested," Greenspun said. "I support Mr. Rudin. It's time we had someone on the board who understands the casino business in Nevada."

Sinatra did not appear for the proxy fight.

State votes to keep ban on swordfish spotter planes

From Our State Bureau
SACRAMENTO—The State Fish and Game Commission on Friday voted to retain its ban on the use of spotter airplanes by commercial hunters of swordfish.

The California Seafood Institute had asked the commission to rescind its ban on spotter planes, imposed last June, because "the present regulation is not in the best interest of the consumer or the industry."

John P. Gilchrist, Sacramento lobbyist for the institute, said U.S. commercial fishing boats were not taking in the "optimum sustainable yield" of swordfish from California waters, and that fact would invite foreign fishing boats to apply for permission to go after swordfish here.

Herbert Kameon of Santa Monica appeared on behalf of Long Beach attorney Clarence Hunt, representing the Tuna Club, the Long Beach Yacht Club and a number of other sport-fishing organizations, and told the commission the use of spotter airplanes directing commercial fishing boats to swordfish threatened to deplete the area's swordfish population dangerously.

He said swordfish being taken at the time of the ban were of a smaller average size than previously, an indication, he said, that the fish were also shrinking in number.

Commissioner Elizabeth Venrick proposed that the use of spotter planes be approved except for weekends and holidays, when most sports fishing boats are in service, but her motion did not receive a second.

The vote to continue the ban was 4-1.

Rock-thrower's description told

The Orange County Sheriff's Department now has prepared a detailed description of a man suspected of being the "phantom" rock thrower of the Riveride Freeway.

Law enforcement authorities are seeking the man in connection with at least 35 rock-throwing incidents since last October on the freeway between Featherly Park and the Green River Golf Course.

The man is described as black, 25 to 35, 135 pounds, 5-feet, 6-inches tall and wearing a chin-strap beard. Normally, he wears a military-style or ski jacket and fatigue pants or coveralls.

Deputy Sheriff David Allen, 32, saw the man up close Wednesday. Allen was off duty and in civilian clothing when he chased the man across an almost-dry Santa Ana River into brush near Featherly Park.

"He ran like a deer and he obviously knew the territory," Allen said. Allen was stabbed in the arm and neck as he gave chase.

Man charged in bank siege to face trial

Albert Monroe Powers, 22, of 8651 Puritan St., Downey, entered the plea at his arraignment before Norwalk Superior Court Judge John L. Donnellan.

Donnellan remanded Powers to sheriff's custody in lieu of $100,000 bail and ordered the defendant returned to court June 23 for pre-trial motions and trial setting.

The charges stem from an incident at the Bank of America branch at 7878 Imperial Highway which began May 2 after a man broke into the bank and took two officials hostage.

Guilty verdict returned in beating death

A Long Beach man was found guilty of first-degree murder Friday in the beating death of an elderly woman during a burglary at her downtown apartment.

A six-man, six-woman Long Beach Superior Court jury deliberated 3 1/2 hours before convicting LeRoy Williams, 28, of 866 California Ave., in the slaying of Viola Rose, 73, of 308 Lime Ave., last Sept. 19.

According to testimony during the six-day trial, Williams' fingerprints were found in many places in Miss Rose's apartment.

Burglar to undergo 90-day diagnostic test

A Long Beach man who pleaded guilty to three charges stemming from the theft of some $19,000 worth of money orders during a liquor store burglary was ordered to undergo a 90-day diagnostic study Friday by Long Beach Superior Court Judge Frank Baffa.

In exchange for the guilty pleas entered May 6 by Albert W. Atherton, 40, of 525 Virginia Court, the judge agreed to order a study by the State Department of Corrections if he intended to sentence the defendant to state prison.

Atherton was charged in a March 3 burglary at J & J Liquors, 540 W. Fourth St., Long Beach.

He was arrested at his home two weeks later following a tip to the Independent Press-Telegram Secret Witness Program from informant IS101B. The informant was paid a $500 reward after Atherton pleaded guilty.

L.B. man convicted in rape, molestation of 12-year-old

A Long Beach Superior Court jury deliberated only 1 1/2 hours Friday before convicting a 23-year-old man of raping a 12-year-old girl in her North Long Beach home March 12.

Benjamin Outen III, of 3502 Santa Fe Ave., Long Beach, was found guilty of one count of forcible rape and one count of child molesting because the victim was younger than 14.

Fuel pump problem driving vintage car owner up a wall

Q. I have a 1939 Mercury sedan that's literally driving me up a wall. I have just installed a new fuel pump at the recommendation of a reputable mechanic.

Still, I am getting gasoline pumped into the oil pan. I can drain the crankcase, put in only two quarts of oil (it holds four) and after about 30 minutes of driving time, the dipstick shows full (gas, of course).

Any suggestions, please? — F.H., Seattle, Wash.

A. Assuming the new fuel pump is in good working order (fuel leaking into the crankcase is caused by a cracked diaphragm), the only other possibility is down the cylinder walls.

This can happen, especially in older cars with lower-compression engines, without being really noticeable. What happens is that one (or possibly more) ing the car to shift in relation to the rear axle. This not only causes uneven wear patterns on the tires but makes the car appear to be moving "crabwise" down the road.

Q. I have a 1972 Volvo 141-E with automatic transmission. I purchased the car used and was informed by the previous owner that he had used only high-quality non-detergent oil in the engine and that he had changed the oil faithfully every 2,000 miles.

I have been advised to switch to detergent multi-viscosity oil. Are there advantages to doing this? Is it possible that the cleaning action of the detergent oil could plug things up with the settled gunk? What about oil use? Is it likely I would use much more oil by switching to detergent oil or would that be temporary? — K.C., Ipswich, N.H.

A. Not too long ago, I advised the owner of a 1969 Camaro with 75,000 miles on it not to switch from non-detergent to detergent oil. I said that I felt that detergent oils will tend to clean out sludge buildups from the other oil and could cause increased oil consumption.

An Exxon representative responded to that by saying that I am perpetuating an old wives' tale. It is, he said, Exxon's position that non-detergent oils not be used in anything except "bicycles and roller skates."

He claims that detergent oils will not clean out deposits left by non-detergent oils. Rather, it will only prevent any additional buildup.

He added that there are very few high-quality non-detergent oils on the market and that motorists in such situations would be advised to use a top-quality multi-viscosity detergent oil, changing both the oil and filter at factory specified intervals.

I'm not so sure, especially in high-mileage cars in which there is no documented evidence of the frequency of maintenance.

However, I do agree with him that high-quality non-detergent oils are becoming more and more scarce, both in the number of manufacturers and in availability.

With your car that has had frequent changes of both oil and filter by an owner who obviously cared, I wouldn't worry about switching over. In the long run, I think you'd be better off.

And I wouldn't be concerned about sediment gunking things up because the detergent additives in oil don't work that way. Simply stated, the detergents keep the foreign particles suspended in the oil so that when you drain your oil, they are flushed out of the engine.

It's true that the oil may pick up some sludge, mainly that which has accumulated in the bottom of the sump. For that reason, you might be advised to change oil and filter more often than recommended the first couple of times.

As for increased consumption, that won't happen unless the engine is severely worn. If it does occur, it will not be temporary.

Questions of general interest will be answered here. Send them to Bill Simmons, 400 N. Broad St., Philadelphia, Pa. 19101.

plugs isn't firing. It could be caused by fouling of the plug itself or by a broken ignition wire or a broken connector in the distributor cap.

What happens is that the fuel enters that cylinder washes down the walls and into the crankcase.

The reason you might not notice it is that engine compression (it was 6.15-to-1 when new) is further reduced by years of use. In a newer high-compression engine, a non-firing plug would be clearly evident as a miss.

The way to check is to run the engine for a few minutes, then shut it off and pull the plugs. The one (s) that isn't firing will be very obvious. It will be soaking wet. Then trace it back to discover why it isn't firing and make the repair.

Whatever you do, don't run it in that condition. The lack of lubrication will very quickly score the cylinder walls and, at the least, you'll face a reboring job.

Q. My car, a 1968 Chrysler station wagon, has worn out two sets of tires on the rear just like they do on the front when it is in need of alignment. They wear just on the side.

Can you tell me what is wrong and what I can do? — W.B., Chester, Pa.

A. There are a few possibilities all having to do with the way your car's rear wheels line up with the front wheels. There obviously is a discrepancy. The cause is something else again.

To check, put the front wheels pointing directly ahead. Then, using a tape measure, check the distance from the center of the rear wheel to the center of the front on one side, then the other. I'm sure you'll find a difference.

The usual cause of this is an accident that causes damage to a car's structural integrity. That usually is quite difficult to fix.

Sometimes the rear spring shackles slip, allow-

Repeal of archaic laws gains

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Under California law, the killing of a master by his servant or the killing of a husband by a wife is petty treason.

It's a misdemeanor to throw an object from a toll bridge, but not a regular bridge.

Refusal by an innkeeper to entertain any guest without just cause also is a misdemeanor.

In San Francisco, failure to notify the owner or fire marshal of any property recovered from a fire is a felony. It isn't anywhere else in the state.

These laws and others considered archaic would be repealed under a bill approved Friday by the Senate.

—A felony to drive a nail in wood which is intended for the manufacture of lumber.

—A misdemeanor for sea captains to import a foreign convict into the state.

—A misdemeanor to conduct any marathon dance contest or other exhibition involving human endurance.

—A felony to seduce an unmarried female "of previous chaste character" with a promise of marriage.

OTHER statutes, of course, cover killings and throwing objects from bridges. The purpose of the bill is to consolidate offenses and make them "readable" to people who aren't lawyers, said Sen. David Roberti, D-Los Angeles, the measure's author.

The bill would define theft, for example, in one statute; replacing all or portions of 50 separate laws.

HOME POKER games and small bets between individuals would also be legal under the bill.

Monumental hairdo part of Dolly Parton's image

Q. We've noticed Dolly Parton's hair seems to be different lengths and different shades of blond. Does she wear wigs? Why? What is the real color? K.G.

A. The real color's light brown. She wears it a nearly-white blond. But most of those monumental hairdos that are part of the Parton image are wigs. She blends her own hair into the front of the

Q. Audrey and Jayne Meadows are sisters, but are they twins? I think not but a friend insists. T.B.

A. Jayne is Audrey's big sister by three years. Both were born in Wu Ching, China, where their parents were missionaries. Jayne in 1926, Audrey in 1929.

Q. Why is John Wayne doing commercials? F.G.H.

A. That's big money in those TV pitches. Duke's just getting in on a good thing — like Henry Fonda, James Garner, and even Sir Laurence Olivier, who sold cameras for a million bucks a couple of years ago. But Sir Laurence's sales talks were only seen over here. He refused to allow them to be shown on British commercial TV.

Q. When did singer Bessie Smith die? J.C.

A. The great blues singer died in an auto accident in 1937 when she was on tour in Mississippi. She was thought to be 39 at the time. (Her biographers can only estimate her age because her birthdate is given variously from 1894 to 1900). Singer Linda Hopkins currently is touring in a successful stage presentation based on Smith's life.

Q. Have you ever heard of a person named Daisy Clover? My sister says she was a famous movie star. N.E.D.

A. Only in the 1965 movie "Inside Daisy Clover." Natalie Wood starred as a 1930s movie actress and the film chronicled Daisy's rise from little nobody to neurotic somebody. Her co-stars were Christopher Plummer, as a tyrannical movie producer, and Robert Redford, as a matinee idol. It was one of Redford's earlier films.

Q. Where could I get a picture of Lesley-Ann Down as she looked in "The Pink Panther Strikes Again?" I really liked her hair and I'd like to have a picture to show my hair stylist. A.S.

A. Try writing United Artists Corp., 729 Seventh Ave., New York, N.Y. 10019. UA released the British-made Peter Sellers comedy, "Olga, the Russian Spy," was a far different role than the one in which most Americans know Down. She was Georgina, ward of Lord Bellamy, in "Upstairs, Downstairs," the British TV series which recently ended its successful run on American public TV.

wigs. Wigs make sense for a performer like Dolly; she doesn't have to spend hours getting her hair done before every performance. "I can get ready 15 minutes faster than any woman I know," she says.

Q. I saw Twiggy on a talk show recently. I can't believe that's her real name. How did she ever get it? A.S.

A. You must not have been around — or aware — during the 1960s when Lesley Hornby's emaciated 91-pound, 31-22-31 frame was bringing her $1,000 a day as a model. Her mentor-manager, Justin de Villeneuve, gave her the name Twiggy, groomed her to fame as symbol of London's Carnaby Street fashion world. She's plump with de Villeneuve now, gained 21 pounds (measurements are now 32-24-32) and is trying for a career as a country-western singer.

Q. Why do they put movies on TV after we have to pay $1.25 to see it in the theater? They shouldn't do that to kids. K.K.

A. Lots of folks, kids and grownups (who pay more than $1.25), would rather see a movie when it's new, uncut and minus interruptions, particularly commercials. There was a time when TV executives figured they'd never get some recent movies on TV because of the sex and violence. Some still are prisoners. It'll be a long time before "The Exorcist" or "Jaws" gets on TV, according to present thinking. But growing sophistication of the TV audience and methods of cutting films for TV have made it possible to get films like "Magnum Force" on the air. One TV executive pointed out that his network had discovered most explicit sex scenes in movies can be cut entirely without any difference to the plot.
